JAPAN PRESSES INVASION SOUTH OF GREAT WALL

Foreigners Preparing to Quit Peiping and Tientsin Area.

NEARBY AIR RAIDS ALARM OLD CAPITAL

U. S. Military Is on Duty in Threatened Sector to Guard Interests.

Peiping, China, March 8 (U.P.). The Japanese invasion of China itself was started today, Chinese military headquarters reported.

An official communique issued this evening reported that the Japanese had bombed Chinese troops fleeing in panic southward along the Peiping highway, 15 miles inside the Great Wall. The air raid occurred south of Kupeikou, a pass through the ancient but now no longer impervious barrier.

The bombing, almost within sight of Peiping, the ancient capital, left the city terror-stricken in fear of an air raid over the city as part of Japan's anticipated conquest of all of China.

Foreigners Are Alarmed.

Foreigners in the Peiping-Tientsin area scanned reports from the demoralized Chinese front in fear. The foreign authorities, including the United States Marine detail in Peiping, prepared for evacuation of Americans and other nationals.

The Chinese frantically prepared dugouts. Thousands began pouring southward, taking all they could carry.

Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, youthful commander in chief of China's armies in the embattled northern war zone, resigned as acting chairman of the Branch Military Council in Peiping.

"Punishment Edicts" Issued.

The Chinese military headquarters published "punishment edicts" against Gen. Tang Yu-Lin, Governor of Jehol, who had promised that his men would defend the province to the last.

Gen. Tang's whereabouts, the Chinese reported, were unknown. A press report from Changchun, Manchukuo capital, said unconfirmed reports there said Tang had been executed by his superior Chinese officers for his flight before the Japanese attack upon Chengtehfu, Jehol's capital.

The American Marines in Peiping and the Fifteenth Infantry Regiment at Tientsin, 90 miles away, near the sea, would be called into action, it was indicated, to defend Americans in the war zone. The authorities feared the possible killing of Americans in the anticipated bombardment would involve the United States in the invasion.

4 More Ships Bought In West by Japanese

London, March 8 (A.P.).—Japan bought two British and two Canadian ships today, bringing to nine the number of vessels it has purchased since the outbreak of hostilities in Jehol Province.

The ships purchased today were the Peninsular and Oriental Line's 5,000-ton Padua, the Glen Line's Glenshane of 6,498 tons, the 5,497-ton Canadian Inventor and the 5,384-ton Canadian Mariner. The two Canadian ships will be used for trading, and the others will be scrapped for the metal they contain.

U. S. S. San Francisco To Be Launched Today

Mare Island, Calif., March 8 (A.P.). Ten thousand tons of concentrated fighting power will be launched here tomorrow when the new cruiser San Francisco slides down the ways to become the fifteenth ship of its class built by the United States under the limitations of the Washington treaty of 1922.

Her cost limited to $11,318,000, exclusive of armor and armament, the navy yard here estimated the actual expenditure at $9,200,000. Her keel was laid September 9, 1931, and she must be completed by February 11, 1934. She is to become a unit of the Atlantic Scouting Fleet.

SPEAKEASIES' BOOM SEEN IN NEW ORDERS

Woodcock Directs Agents to Avoid Bars and Strike at Wholesalers.

Slackening of speakeasy etiquette which required that new customers be introduced, eliminating of peepholes and iron-bound doors and the cure for that now almost innate suspicion of strangers suffered by bartenders are seen as the immediate effect of the announcement that Federal agents will not molest the speakeasy.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition director, announced yesterday that the enforcement efforts of the Federal agents would be concentrated "almost entirely" on liquor manufacturers and transporters.

This order means that the Government will not attempt to enforce the law against the sale of intoxicants in the modern counterpart of the saloon, leaving this part of the work to the States, many of which have repealed their enforcement legislation.

Col. Woodcock's order put into immediate effect the restrictions of Congress which were to apply after July 1. He explained that it was necessary because of the economy provisions of the new appropriation bill restricting the purchase of liquor for evidence and the paying of informers and wiretapping.

It was said in unofficial police circles here yesterday that the new order

San Salvador Regime Recognized by Uruguay

Gen. Martinez took office in December, 1931, after a military coup which sent President Arturo Araujo fleeing into exile. A year ago the State Department in Washington refused to receive a special emissary seeking recognition for the Martinez government, on the ground that it had not been constitutionally reorganized.

Record Attempt Started By South African Flier

Limpne Airdrome, England (Thursday), March 9 (U.P.).—Victor Smith, the young South African flier, departed at 2:05 a. m. today on his third attempt to set a record flight to Cape Town.

Smith, who hopes to beat the record set recently by Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, British aviatrix, failed in two earlier attempts to reach his goal. Mrs. Mollison set the record of 4 days 6 hours 53 minutes last November.

$100,000 Embezzling Charged to Carolinian

Winston-Salem, N. C., March 8 (A.P.).—W. T. Shore, Charlotte attorney, was indicted today by the Forsyth County grand jury on charges of embezzling $100,000 while acting as agent for his cousin, Mrs. Maude B. Trotman, a daughter of F. M. Bohannon, late tobacco magnate of Winston-Salem.

Mrs. Trotman was recently removed as guardian for her four children when evidence was procurred that a $700,000 trust fund provided for them by their grandfather had been exhausted.

GIANT SWINDLE OF MILLIONAIRE VICTIMS BARED

W. C. DURANT AMONG CLIENTS IN SCHEME

Silk Dealer Says He Was Told Treasure Was Descended From Carranza.

Newark, N. J., March 8 (A.P.). A man described by police as an international confidence man who swindled wealthy New Yorkers of $200,000 by promising to share with them millions of dollars of hidden silver, was arrested in a hotel here today.

He was registered at the hotel as Edward E. Jackson, but police said he admitted his name is Edward E. Jochen.

The prisoner denied the charges but was held as a fugitive from New York.

Durant Among Victims.

He was arrested on information furnished by one of his alleged victims, George Eghyan, silk merchant of New York City, who told police he had given Jochen $5,000 and had gained a worthless check for $640 last October.

Among other victims, police said, were W. C. Durant, automobile manufacturer who lost $30,000; Richard E. Enright, former New York police commissioner; Bertram de N. Cruger, former New York commissioner of correction; Frank Babcock of the Fisk Tire & Rubber Co.; Julian Beatty, New York attorney, and former United States Senator Owen, of Oklahoma.

Fell Heir to Fortune.

Eghyan told police that Jochen's story was he had been a confidential financial agent of former President Carranza, of Mexico, and that Carranza had given Jochen 50,000,000 ounces of silver to smuggle out of Mexico. Jochen, Eghyan said he was told, hid the silver in vaults at the Bachman warehouse, Bremerhaven, Germany, and fell heir to the fortune after he paid off certain of Carranza's supporters following upon the latter's execution.

To transport the silver back to this country, Eghyan said Jochen declared, he needed ready cash to pay a ship's crew and to make other arrangements.

Neighbor States Urge Gran Chaco Armistice

Buenos Aires, March 8 (A.P.).—Foreign Minister Saavedra Lamas, of Argentina, confirmed reports today that Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru had proposed an armistice in the Gran Chaco border warfare between Bolivia and Paraguay, pending negotiations to solve the controversy.

Diplomatic representatives of the two warring nations and Chile conferred with the Foreign Minister earlier today, presumably in connection with the Gran Chaco dispute. Reports from the presidential mansion indicated that the armistice proposal had been well received by Bolivia and Paraguay.

LehmanAnnounces Scrip Issue Barred

Secretary of Treasury Revokes Permission Given New York.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman announced tonight that the Treasury Department had prohibited the issuance of scrip by the Emergency Certificate Corporation set up last night by the Legislature. Without any further comment, the governor handed out the following statement tonight:

"I am in receipt of the following official telegram from the Treasury Department at Washington:

"'Secretary of Treasury Hereby revokes permission to issue certificates granted to the corporation of the State of New York organized to provide an adequately secured temporary medium of exchange.

"'Power of revocation is exercised in accordance with regulations issued March 7, 1933, by Secretary under authority conferred upon him by the President's proclamation on March 6.'"

Boulaye Is Named To Replace Claudel

Latter Sent to Brussels in Greatest Recent Paris Shift of Envoys.

Paris, March 8 (A.P.).—Andre Lefevre de la Boulaye, veteran of the French diplomatic service, today was named ambassador to Washington.

He succeeds Ambassador Paul Claudel, who was named to the Brussels post succeeding Charles Corbin, who in turn was appointed to go to London.

The official diplomatic shake-up, one of the largest in recent French history, was announced after a cabinet meeting. Charles Alphand, former minister to Dublin, was named ambassador to Moscow. Aime Joseph de Fleuriau, ambassador to London, and Count Francois Robert de Jean, who held the same post as Moscow, will retire.

The new ambassador to Washington, who is 57, was first secretary of the embassy in Washington during the administration of Woodrow Wilson. During that time he became well acquainted with President Roosevelt, who was Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

$2,000,000,000 FEDERAL RESERVE ISSUE APPROVED AT WHITE HOUSE; D. C. BANKS TO ALLOW 'VITAL' CASH

Pay Roll Problems Still Unsolved In Capital

HEAVY DRAINS SEEN AS PERIL

Lack of Deposits for Regular Accounts Held Menace

By DANIEL B. MAHER.

All Capital banks will permit limited withdrawals by depositors for the necessities of life pending enactment of the legislation which, it was predicted at the White House last night, will open banks by tomorrow morning.

The action of the Washington Clearing House in recommending that its member banks permit the withdrawal of funds to meet emergency needs, will immediately relieve all cases where individuals had money on deposit in banks to meet their requirements but had no other sources of income or ready cash.

Should the legislation to be introduced today achieve its objective, that is, permit the resumption of banking activities by tomorrow, it will mean that broadened banking functions, including the payment of pay rolls, may be expected.

Gold Hoarders to Be Bared.

Meanwhile, the names of all depositors who have withdrawn gold from banks in this Federal Reserve region since February 1, were asked by the Federal Reserve Board, in what was interpreted as a move to force the metal from hoarders into the Federal Treasury.

The request to Gov. George J. Seay, head of this Federal Reserve region, asks the identities of all those who posses gold as of March 13. Anyone who has gold hidden away may deposit it in any of the special trust accounts which many of the local banks have established. There accounts under Treasury rules are subject to withdrawal on demand.

Certified Withdrawals.

By the Clearing House action money will be made accessible where there is actual need of funds for the procurement of food, medicine, or for the relief of distress. This money may be obtained in limited amounts when the depositor has certified to the necessity for the requested withdrawal.

Pay Roll Problem Vexes.

The vexatious problem of releasing money for pay roll purposes, under Treasury regulations is being closely studied by the Clearing House Association. The indications are that in the absence of any regulation of the Secretary of the Treasury which would allow banks to accept deposits in regular accounts, money for wage paying purposes will be temporarily frozen. This may be ob-

STATEMENTS

The text of President Roosevelt's statement early today follows:

I have been in conference with members of the Senate and House and have talked over with them a measure which has been carefully studied and prepared and which will immediately relieve the situation and at once start banking operations throughout the entire country.

I have been assured that there is every prospect of the immediate passage of this legislation on its introduction.

I am gratified at the outlook.

We have gone over a tentative draft of the bill with some care.

It is the opinion of all in the conference that the bill will be passed through both houses, Thursday, and that it will result in the opening of a large number of banks on Friday.

As the draft of the bill is not yet complete we are not at liberty to answer questions as to details of the measure, but they will be available by Thursday noon.

HOARDERS OF GOLD WILL BE IDENTIFIED

Federal Reserve Banks Are Ordered to Report Who Has Obtained Metal.

(Associated Press.)

Instructions to forward to Washington the names of all individuals who have withdrawn gold from member banks since February 1, have been dispatched to the twelve Federal Reserve banks by the Reserve Board here.

Reserve board officials indicated the move was in accordance with President Roosevelt's general plan for drawing hoarded gold back into the vaults of the Reserve System, where it can be made the basis for an expansion of the currency.

The instructions as revealed at the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond were that the names of all who withdrew gold since February 1, and still hold it next Monday, should be submitted.

Whether the ultimate purpose of the orders is the publication of the names of gold hoarders was not revealed, but officials were confident that the veiled threat of such action would be successful in bringing large amounts out of hiding.

Funeral for Walsh In Montana Today

Helena, Mont., March 8 (A.P.).—Senator Thomas J. Walsh reentered his home State in death tonight as thousands waited to pay final tribute to his memory.

The train bearing the body late today reached the State in which the senator made his home more than 40 years. It passed through Glendive, Miles City and Billings tonight, and was to reach Helena at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. All along the way Montanans gathered at the stations as a last token of respect for the late senator.

His body will be the first to lie in state in the Capitol here. Solemn requiem mass will be said later in the St. Helena Cathedral. Senator Walsh will be buried beside the body of his first wife in Resurrection Cemetery. All Helena business houses, public offices and schools of the city will be closed during the services.

Measure Necessary to Provide New Money Will Be Rushed Through Both Houses of Congress Today.

"I AM GRATIFIED AT OUTLOOK," PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SAYS

Draft of Program Will Be Made Public at Noon as Special Message Is Being Read on Capitol Hill.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Immediate expansion of the Federal Reserve currency to provide approximately $2,000,000,000 for new circulation was decided upon at the White House last night as the major step in President Roosevelt's program of emergency banking legislation.

The new money will make it possible to open the banks of the country for general business tomorrow morning.

Emergency powers of regulation and control will remain in the hands of the President, pending enactment of a permanent scheme of financial legislation.

The measure necessary to provide the new money, which will be backed by Federal Reserve gold and Government bonds, will be passed in both the House and Senate today.

Agreement upon the expansion measure was announced officially by the President a few minutes before midnight, after a three-hour White House conference with both Democratic and Republican leaders of the House and Senate.

President Will Sign Bill Before Sundown.

"I am gratified at the outlook," the President said in a formal statement announcing the agreement on the vital measure. He will sign the bill before sundown today.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, joined Representative Henry T. Rainey, the Speaker-designate in the new Congress, in pleading enactment of the bill today.

This joint statement from the men who are charged with driving the legislation through the special session which assembles at noon, said that the bill "will result in the opening of a large number of the banks on Friday."

The draft of the currency program will be made public at noon, simultaneously with the reading of President Roosevelt's message to Congress.

Nonmember Banks to Get New Money.

Distribution of the new currency will be through the twelve regional Federal Reserve Banks, but nonmember banks will be eligible, under the terms of the emergncy regulations, to obtain money for their sound assets on the same terms as the member banks.

This arrangement insures the prompt and widespread diffusion of the currency among banks recently suffering from excessive withdrawals.

Treasury officials said the plan would immediately revive normal banking operations and stimulate trade and employment.

"We see the light!" Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin exclaimed as he left the White House early this morning. He had been in conference continuously with President Roosevelt since 5 p. m.

In announcing the results of the White House conference President Roosevelt said:

"I have been in conference with members of the Senate and the House and have talked over with them a measure which has been carefully studied and prepared and which will immediately relieve the situation and at once start banking operations throughout the entire country.

"I have been assured that there is every prospect of the immediate passage of this legislation on its introduction. I am gratified at the outlook."

Soundly Controlled.

Informal analysis of the measure approved by the conference disclosed that the new money will be soundly controlled and backed by the same security as Treasury notes.

It is anticipated that when currency in circulation returns to normal levels, the temporary new issues will be wholly retired.

The text of the statement issued by Senator Robinson and Representative Rainey at the White House said:

"We have gone over a tentative

Tsaldaris Allowed To Form Ministry

Order Restored by Dictator, President of Greece Gives Permission.

Athens, March 8 (A.P.). — Despite the brief military dictatorship designed to prevent a government headed by Panayoti Tsaldaris, Royalist leader, President Alexander Zaimis informed Tsaldaris today that he might form a Ministry whenever he liked. The administration probably will be completed Friday.

The President took this action after he had been assured by Premier Othonaios, who succeeded the brief dictatorship, headed by Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, that order had been established throughout the country.

Gen. Plastiras set up his dictatorship Monday and resigned yesterday, saying he believed he had prevented the establishment of a government led by Tsaldaris. Tsaldaris was the victor in last Sunday's general election over Eleutherios Venizelos, veteran Greek political leader, who has headed numerous governments.

Britain Suspends Money Order Service With U.S.

London, March 8 (A.P.). — The postoffice announced today the suspension of telegraphic money order service with the United States, Cuba and Newfoundland until further notice. A similar ban by the Irish Free State was announced at Dublin last night.

The British postoffice announced also that money orders from the States and its Territories are liable to delay in payment.

Camden, N. J., March 8 (A.P.).—Judge Frank Neutze of District Court refused today to order 247 families evicted for nonpayment of rent.

Book of President Urges Wider Income Distribution

Roosevelt, in Volume to Appear Wednesday, Says Attention of United States Is Turning More From Producer to Consumer.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—A call for a "more equitable distribution of national income" and a prediction that in the future America will think more about the consumer and less about the producer are made by President Roosevelt in a book to be published March 16.

The material of the book was based on Mr. Roosevelt's public addresses, which he revised and amplified.

Under the title "Looking Forward," the new President has outlined his political and economic credo.

"I believe," he writes, "that we are at the threshold of a fundamental change in our economic thought. I believe that in the future we are going to think less about the producer and more about the consumer.

"Do what we may to inject health into our ailing economic order, we can not make it endure for long unless we can bring about a wiser, more equitable distribution of the national income.

"It is well within the inventive capacity of man * * * to insure that all who are willing and able to work receive from it at least the necessities of life. In such a . . tem the reward for a day's work will have to be greater, on the average, than it has been, and the reward to capital, especially capital that is superlative, will have to be less. * * *

3-WAY ASSAULT ON BENEFITS TO VETERANS NEAR

DOUGLAS FINISHING WIDE MERGER PLANS

Reports of Further Federal Salary Reductions Are Still Prevalent.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

A three-way attack on veterans benefits, as sequel to the new administration's economy objective, is in immediate prospect following special session disposition of emergency banking measures.

Intimations last night were that the assault will come from the White House, from members of the House independent offices appropriations subcommittee, and from a majority of the special joint committee on review of veterans compensation.

This prolific source of new economies will be the pivotal turning point of a renewed retrenchment drive, with the resumption of normal legislative activities, after a brief recess, following the special session opening today.

Entire Reorganization Near.

Meanwhile, Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas is putting the finishing touches on a comprehensive scheme for reorganization of the Federal structure, in line with the broad reorganization powers voted Mr. Roosevelt by the last Congress.

Although details of the program have been closely guarded, speculation as to its provisions were rife yesterday. The Budget Bureau carefully withheld confirmation of all reports.

One of the most persistent, affecting Federal employes here, was that personnel classification files of the Civil Service Commission have been studied with a view to possible repeal of the reclassification act of 1923, and realignment of Federal salaries on a lower plane.

Pay-Cut Reports Persist.

Local employe organizations refused to place wide credence in the report, Budget Director Douglas having gone on record against further pay reduction before his retirement from Congress. Nevertheless, the report persisted. Bills to repeal the reclassification act revising wages upward, were introduced in both Houses last session, but never got out of committee.

There is no denying, however, the imminence of the impending attack on benefits for veterans' nonservice disabilities. In authoritative government quarters it was said Mr. Roosevelt will ask Congress for power to reach veterans' compensation through revision of all benefits. This is proposed by former Speaker Garner in connection with the reorganization authorization, but was dropped when a storm broke around the proposal on the floor of the House.

Former President Hoover's veto of the independent offices appropriations bill paved the way for early congressional reconsideration of Veterans Administration appropriations contained in that measure. When the appropriations subcommittee meets again to redraft the measure, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, is expected to renew his demand for a 10 per cent horizontal slash in veterans' compensation.

In Sharp Disagreement.

The special joint committee on review of veterans' legislation has 60 days in which to complete its recommendations. Although members are in sharp disagreement on the advisability of cutting payments, this group is expected to draw up a majority report advocating a scaling down of payments. There is sure to be a minority report opposing, perhaps even several individual opinions.

Although the office of the conference on home building and home ownership in the Commerce Department was vacated yesterday, it was said at the department that the conference, which is financed by private funds, is merely transferring its headquarters to 42 Broadway, New York City.

The conference, in which President Hoover was interested, has practically wound up its work, and published its last volume a month ago, it was said.

Reports persisted that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, also located in the Commerce Department Building, may be one of the first units to go by the board under the President's reorganization plans.

Honduran President Limits Bank Payment

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, March 8 (A.P.).—President Tiburcio Carias Andino today issued an emergency decree prohibiting the payment by banks of more than 10 per cent on sight obligations during the next six days.

HOARDERS OF GOLD WILL BE IDENTIFIED

Gov. George J. Seay of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond received instructions from the Federal Reserve Board tonight to furnish the names of all persons in the district who have withdrawn gold from member banks since February 1. Washington is in the Richmond district.

The notice from the Reserve Board asked that he "furnish as far as possible and as soon after March 13 as practical the names of all persons who have withdrawn gold from the Federal Reserve Bank and from member banks throughout the first district since February 1, 1933, and failed to redeposit it by March 13, 1933."

At the same time, Gov. Seay made public what he termed an "act of patriotism" on the part of a Richmond citizen who exchanged $1,500 of gold currency for other forms of currency.

3 Engraving Bureau Shifts Rush Reserve Board Notes

Flow of Visitors Increases as Force Completes $500 to $10,000 Bills and Begins Turning Out $5 to $50 Denominations.

(Associated Press.)

Lights blaze from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing these nights as three shifts of workers hasten the printing of crisp Federal Reserve notes.

The order for the speed up came from the Federal Reserve Board on March 4, bureau officials say. Printing began immediately on the higher denominations from $500 to $10,000 bills. Now the machines are busily turning out denominations from $5 to $50.

The bureau had been working its regular one-shift schedule previous to the March 4 order.

Now high stacks of greenbacks pile up on the workers' decks as the constant flow of visitors, more than ever curious about the plant, file across the spectators ramps hung above the working floors.

Women counters run through piles, rubber "fingers" on their hands, counting, checking for misprints, tieing sections of uncut bills together ready for the cutting machines.

On another side of the room sheets of paper, large enough to hold the faces of six bills are placed in stacks by the printers. The sheets are soft, bend easily as they are handled, because they are taken to the presses after days of dampening to the point where they will pick up ink from the plates easily.

Then, sheet by sheet, they slip rapidly under a heavy roller, face down to the plate that will mark them as the public finally sees them. Again they go through a process of drying and dampening, and then the other side is printed.

Each movement of the workers has been so carefully planned that the money stacks rise rapidly.

Back in the recesses of the building where the ordinary visitor does not go is a huge vault surrounded by thick steel, and secured behind three sets of locks. There, the bills finally get a breathing space.

Shelves rise to the ceiling holding every denomination from the plebian one to the aristocratic ten-thousand-dollar variety—shelves these days that are rapidly filling up their empty stretches as the hum of the printing presses fills the building the whole 24 hours of the day.

TOTAL OF BUSINESS CHEERS MERCHANTS

Trade Now Parallels Banking System of Mutual Indebtedness.

Smiles on both sides of counters characterized the attitude of merchants and public in Washington yesterday.

The way in which the volume of business is keeping up was a genuine surprise to the local business world. Trade, it was observed, is now paralleling the banking system in normal times, that is through a system of mutual indebtedness.

The foundation of the banking system, merchants pointed out, is based on evidences of mutual indebtedness. Trade is now duplicating the system with merchandise and labor as the mediums of exchange. The public is buying on credit, the merchants are buying from wholesalers and jobbers on credit and labor is being obtained on credit. When the banks reopen and obligations now being made are met, business will go forward again along its customary path, it was pointed out.

The consensus seemed to be that there's nothing to worry about. Food and clothing could still be bought.

Col. Dunlap's Widow Turns in Gold Gifts

In hope that her example will precipitate a cascade of gold coins into the Treasury, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, of 1758 K street northwest, yesterday converted into greenbacks a gold eagle and a $5 piece which she had put away in a safe deposit box.

"I remembered that in England in 1931 everybody turned in all their gold, even their wedding rings," said Mrs. Dunlap, the widow of Gen. Robert H. Dunlap, U. S. M. C., who was killed in France by a landslide last year. "Then I remembered these coins that I received at Christmas, so I thought I might be able to set an example."

Mrs. Dunlap took her two coins to the Treasury, where she was given two rather worn bills.

"I do hope that others may follow this example," Mrs. Dunlap said. "Surely we are as patriotic as the English, and there is a lot of difference between giving up just a coin and giving up a ring or jewelry."

BANKS REOPEN TOMORROW

draft of the bill and considered it with some care. It is the opinion of all in the conference that the bill will be passed through both houses Thursday and that it will result in the opening of a large number of banks on Friday.

"As the draft is not yet complete we are not at liberty to announce the details of the measure, but they will be available by noon."

Would Approve Holiday.

The bill would place the stamp of congressional approval on the actions which have been taken so far by President Roosevelt in dealing with the banking emergency. It would give approval to the President's proclamation on the bank holiday and would make certain, by additional congressional declaration, of his authority to control the situation until normal business sentiment is restored.

The bill does not put a rigid limit on the account of new currency which might be issued under its provisions, but Federal Reserve regulations establish sharp limits of expansion.

The bill would not permanently change any of the fundamentals of existing banking laws. It is not designed to be a part of the permanent banking status of the Nation. It was presented to the conference of Senate and House leaders last night as a "purely temporary" measure designed to permit opening of the banks immediately.

Crisis Has Been Weathered.

Detailed Treasury regulations governing the issuance of the additional currency are expected this morning.

After the White House conference, Secretary Woodin and Attorney General Cummings remained with the President for more than an hour to perfect the final draft of the legislation.

Leaving the Executive Mansion shortly after 2 a. m., Secretary Woodin returned to his office in the Treasury to begin work on the new regulations. Meanwhile, a staff of stenographers in the headquarters of the Federal Reserve Board, nearby, had sent out several thousand telegrams to banks and clearing houses in every State announcing that a new and adequate circulating medium was speedily on the way. In a word, these brief messages informed the American banking community and millions of depositors that the crisis had been faced—and weathered triumphantly.

For the first time in more than two weeks the lights of the Federal Reserve Board rooms were extinguished before dawn.

Crisis and Budget Cut.

Linking the gigantic problem of the Federal budget with emergency plans for reopening the banks, President Roosevelt determined last night upon a drastic slashing of Government expenses as an urgent step in his immediate program for hastening adequate supplies of sound currency into the credit system of the Nation.

In a brief message to the special session of Congress today, the President will recommend extension of his emergency powers as the first necessity in his banking program. At the same time, he will present plans for balancing the 1934 budget, as an essential step in the maintenance of sound money and credit.

National Scrip Foregone.

Scrip issues on a Nation-wide basis were definitely abandoned in the Treasury conferences yesterday as reports from the twelve Federal Reserve banks told of a gradual expansion of asential operations through the regular Federal Reserve channels. With the Treasury orders of Tuesday night in operation in the twelve reserve cities, word was imminent that new money supplies would be released today.

Although White House officials would not discuss the proportions of the anticipated budget slashing, Treasury officials in close touch with this phase of the problem indicated the recommendations would come very close to carrying out the pledge Mr. Roosevelt made in his Pittsburgh speech last October to cut Federal expenditures by 25 per cent. With this vigorous step toward stabilization of Federal finances, the whole problem of banking and currency will be vastly simplified. Not only will the prospect of a balanced budget go far in the direction of restoring banking confidence, but it will aid materially to reduce current demands upon the banking resources of the country. The question of adequate money then will be largely self-liquidating.

Message Will Be Brief.

"The situation demands brevity," President Roosevelt said yesterday in discussing plans for his emergency message to Congress.

Under the program outlined last night the special session will enact the necessary banking legislation within a few days and then adjourn for two or three weeks to allow the President to determine upon his long-time banking program.

It is imperative that the President's emergency powers over gold supplies, and his plenary authority to wipe out unpatriotic hoarding of currency, be continued until the long-time program is on the statute books, it was explained yesterday on the highest authority.

The President, therefore, is prepared to seek fairly broad executive powers over banking for at least 30 days.

In all these plans Government officials are steering toward an effective mobilization of the Nation's monetary gold supplies and the efficient use of these stocks in a gold-based Federal Reserve currency adequate to the needs of the day.

Long-Time Plans Wait.

How more than $500,000,000 is to be cut from the 1934 budget was not disclosed in official circles last night pending completion of the President's message. Confidence was expressed in high quarters, however, that the job would be done, and that the beginning would be made this week. The point of first attack on the deficit is expected to be revealed in the President's message today.

The President was represented yesterday as feeling it would be impossible to draft anything like complete and permanent legislation on banking under the present conditions. Although there has been a vast and continuing improvement in financial sentiment during the last 48 hours, the pressure of the Treasury and banking conferences have precluded the President's formulating his long-time plans on banking reorganization.

To a degree the same applies to details of the budget-balancing program.

The President is satisfied that the domestic banking situation can be satisfactorily stabilized on a Nation-wide basis, without regard to the more complex picture presented in preparations for the forthcoming world economic conference. The banking community was encouraged yesterday by this word that the domestic problem, in its immediate aspects, is not enmeshed in the larger picture of Europe's economic dislocation. It is for this reason, some officials declare, that the President's control over gold exports and redemption must be maintained intact.

In the longer view, of course, the problems of international exchanges arise as a phrase of the world economic discussions, but with these the administration is not immediately concerned, and confidence is expressed in Treasury circles that American banking will not be retarded by the foreign situation.

Public Feeling Improves.

President Roosevelt's known views in favor of uniform banking operations throughout the country were said yesterday not to imply necessarily a legally unified banking system. Uniform procedure may be attained in the long-time program by cooperation with the States, it was pointed out. For the immediate future, however, the entire banking structure, State and National, is to remain centralized under the President's plenary powers.

Secretary of the Treasury Woodin told newspapermen yesterday that he was "astonished" by the fighting front shown by the country since the President's proclamation Sunday night.

"The response of the country to our actions has been tremendous and the sentiment of the people today is truly encouraging."

It was this improvement in sentiment which resulted in the complete abandonment of the Nation-wide scrip discussions.

As the President began his emergency legislative conference he had with him Vice President Garner and two members of his Cabinet, Secretary Woodin and Attorney General Cummings. Members of the Senate who participated in the discussions included Robinson, of Arkansas; McNary, Harrison, Glass, Byrnes, Dill, Johnson, La Follette, Costigan and Norris. From the House came Representatives Rainey, Snell, Byrns, McDuffie, Woodrum and Steagall.

There are ample gold stocks in the country, either in the hands of the Federal Reserve Regional Banks, in member banks, or in State-chartered institutions, to support a vast increase in Federal Reserve currency. The orders telegraphed to the 12 Reserve banks by Secretary Woodin late Tuesday night paved the way for the prompt mobilization of gold stocks in the Federal Reserve System, and its maximum use, if necessary, as backing for additional Federal currency.

If this policy is aggressively executed by the banks, an additional $2,000,000,000 in Federal Reserve notes could be put in circulation immediately and with adequate gold backing under existing law.

Since gold withdrawals are suspended by the President's proclamation, member banks are free to pool their gold reserves, including gold certificates, with the region Reserve banks. With each $40 in gold so deposited, the member bank would deposit also $60 in Government bonds or eligible Federal Reserve paper. This would provide for the release of $100 in Federal Reserve currency.

Banking experts of the Government assert that nothing like this amount of money would be needed to start the banks going on the basis of existing Treasury regulations. The figures indicate, however, how quickly flexible the Federal Reserve system is under present law. All of this could be accomplished without any action whatever in Congress. The plan can not be made operative, however, until it is certain that the suspension of gold payments will be continued beyond the expiration of the President's emergency proclamation at midnight tonight. This extension must be achieved either by a new executive proclamation or by some action of Congress today, vesting the President with continuing emergency power.

In the event that still more actual cash might be desirable after the available gold resources of the Federal Reserve member banks had been used as currency backing, there is still latent authority under the Borah-Glass amendment last July (to the Home Loan Bank bill) to permit the circulation of an additional $840,000,000 in national bank notes secured by Government bonds.

Still Further Resources.

Below these immediately available currency resources, none of which have been fully tapped, there still lay the vast store of gold in banks outside of the Federal Reserve System. Under the Tuesday night instructions to the twelve Reserve banks, these stocks also may be pooled in the Reserve cities as backing for additional currency, as under the Treasury's emergency orders, nonmember banks also may avail themselves, within the discretion of the regional Reserve banks, of the currency privileges for impounded gold.

Latest Government figures indicate that monetary gold holdings of nonmember banks aggregate in the vicinity of $600,000,000. This provides potential backing for another $1,500,000,000 in gold-based paper currency.

Thus there is now available in the United States sufficient bank gold to back new currency issues aggregating $4,300,000,000.

Banking officers of the Government emphasized last night that this gold provides for a total gold-based circulation amounting to more than twice the total money normally in circulation during the period 1923-1928. Present circulation is $6,720,000,000. As the emergency currency issues flow back to the banks, and as banking and credit sentiment returns to normal, the impounded gold would be reclaimed by the member banks from the Federal Reserve centers. In as little as 30 days, Government experts assert, currency in circulation would drop to the normal volume again.

More Gold Available.

Another picture of the vast resources of American gold stocks was presented informally last night by an analysis of the latest figures on Federal Reserve circulation. Total notes of this class in circulation as of March 6 were only $3,865,000,000. Behind this volume of money was $2,181,000,000 in gold, plus $1,032,000,000 in commercial paper, plus $661,000,000 in Government bonds.

This analysis discloses that less than one-half of America's total monetary gold stocks now are being used to back Federal Reserve currency. The mobilization of the balance of the Nation's sterile gold for additional currency, should it be desirable during the period of abnormal hoarding, is the task assumed by the Treasury under its emergency banking control program.

In general terms, these figures present the basic thought of high Government officials on ways and means for maintaining the domestic gold standard during the period of adjustment. A flexible currency, as provided in the Federal Reserve law, may thus be regarded as sound and adequate currency.

Ritchie Sees President.

The problem of the State banks, as those institutions stand in relation to the long-time banking reorganization program, was presented at the White House yesterday by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland. He conferred with President Roosevelt for more than than an hour regarding the status of Maryland banks not affiliated with the Federal Reserve System or with metropolitan clearing houses.

After his conference, Gov. Ritchie told newspapermen he felt satisfied State banks would fare equitably in the administration's permanent banking program.

"Whatever may be the sound banking system of the future," Gov. Ritchie said, "whether it requires the survival of the strong only or not, I do not think it should be accomplished at the sacrifice of the jeopardy of these smaller banks, which, in my State and in other States, are part of the very life of the people.

Senator Long Secretive.

"My plea is that the Federal plans take this into account and give these banks the chance to live now, and if sound national policy contemplates supplanting them in the future, that at least this be done in a way that assures no unnecessary loss to the people whose homes and livelihood and savings depend upon them."

Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana, another stanch defender of the State banks and leader of the historic filibuster which killed off the Glass banking revision bill in the short session, was also a White House caller yesterday. He did not reveal what he discussed with the President but indicated banking matters had figured in his visit.

Senator Long was in his wonted rollicking mood when he left the Executive Offices. "I am satisfied," he said with a show of boisterous enthusiasm. "Everything is going to be all right. The President is going through. There will be no surprises for the people, and no disappointments. And I'm not the easiest person in the world to satisfy."

McAdoo at White House.

Before the Congressional leaders began to arrive, by ones and twos, late in the afternoon, the President also conferred at length with Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, whose influence upon banking policies during the emergency has been considerable. Later the President called Attorney General Cummings to the White House for a brief conference. Mr. Cummings indicated no specific legislation would be necessary in the special session to provide adequate expansion of the Federal Reserve currency. There was no authoritative indication, however, that this had been the subject of his conference with the President.

Treasury Order No. 15 yesterday was a routine decision amplifying one of Monday's regulations. Order No. 7 Monday freed for disbursement all funds deposited under special agreements after bank decisions limiting withdrawals, and all funds deposited under State guarantees before the national holiday proclamation. Yesterday's amplification of this order provided merely that such special funds redeposited in second banks are brought within the terms of Order No. 7.

The text of Order No. 15 follows:

The permission granted in Regulation No. 7 (that deposits heretofore received by any banking institution pursuant to agreement or legislative authority providing for segregation and repayment without restriction may be paid on demand) includes any bank in which any such deposits have been redeposited by or on behalf of the receiving bank in accordance with such agreement or legislative authority.

ALDRICH PROPOSES WIDE BANK REFORM

Chase Chairman for Divorce of Investment Houses From Commercial.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—A plan for banking reform regarded as the most sweeping and drastic that has yet come out of Wall street was advanced tonight by Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman on the governing board and president of the Chase National Bank, largest commercial bank in the world.

The general objective set forth by Mr. Aldrich would be the absolute divorce of the commercial and investment phases of banking and to this end he announced steps had been taken to sever the Chase National Bank from the Chase-Harris-Forbes Corporation, its securities distributing affiliate.

The far-flung proposals of Mr. Aldrich would slash close alliances now existing between some of the large commercial banks and the large private banking firms in Wall street and would prohibit private banking firms dealing in securities from accepting deposits. The plan also involves inclusion of all commercial banks in the Federal Reserve system.

The feature of his recommendations, which attracted the most attention in Wall street, was the effect they would have on the district's leading private banking firms, including the international banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co.

The Morgan firm's relations with several of the largest Wall street banks are regarded as being very close, with several of the partners holding directorships in the banks.

Under the Aldrich proposals, the Morgan firm, among others, would be deprived of its deposit business unless the firm gave up dealing in securities and consented to make public the same information on conditions that commercial banks do. In some quarters the Morgan firm has come to be pointed out as the prime example of close relations between private and commercial banking.

Mrs. Barnett Hard-Up With $2,300 Monthly

Los Angeles, March 8 (A.P.).—Jackson Barnett, richest Indian in the world, gets $2,300 monthly in oil royalties from the Government, but the amount is insufficient to meet the family needs, his white wife testified today in the Government's suit to invalidate their marriage and recover half a million dollars for Barnett.

Arkansas Indigent Bill Is on Way to Governor

Little Rock, Ark., March 8 (A.P.).—A unique plan for aiding the indigent aged of Arkansas through a 1 per cent tax on all State and county expenditures gained final legislative approval late today and now goes to Gov. Futrell.

It provides that the State and county treasurers shall deduct 1 per cent of the face value of every State or county warrant, including those for salaries of officials, presented for payment.

WALL STREET SEEKS CLEARING OF CHECKS

Dr. Edie Denies Famine of Currency Prevails or Threatens.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Wall street leaders were discussing today means to resume regular check clearing operations as the next step—and a vital one, in their opinion—designed to restore business to normal.

Dr. Lionel D. Edie, Wall street economist, issued a memorandum concurred in by a number of bank executives.

"The way to lift business paralysis," he said, "is to open the banks and to announce that checks will be honored when marked 'payable through clearing house.' As to country checks, the equivalent marking would be 'payable through Federal Reserve Banks.'"

A number of banking authorities here feel that currency is a mere incident to the whole situation, and that a misleading emphasis on this question has dominated public discussion, owing to the burden placed upon currency because of the lack of normal means of settlement. Currency outstanding, it was pointed out, is already at record-breaking proportions, and would be excessive, could settlements again function through the tried and efficent medium of checks.

"There is no real shortage of currency, actual or potential," said Dr. Edie. "The banks should be directed to refuse withdrawals of currency for hoarding purposes. Their discretion in the matter is sufficient to pass judgment on indivdual cases."

Steps to restore clearings, he continued, would immediately restore velocity of circulation of bank deposits which formerly has been the method of doing 90 per cent of the business. Reverting to a currency or scrip basis would be to return to the crude methods of 100 years ago, he added.

Oklahoma's Financial Situation Much Easier

Oklahoma City, March 8 (A.P.).—Oklahoma's financial paralysis eased today with additional issues of local scrip, opening of several banks under Federal holiday restrictions, and the enactment of a new banking law.

Gov. William H. Murray signed the banking bill late today, placing power to limit withdrawals in the hands of the State bank commissioner, with the approval of the governor, and carrying heavy penalties for violations. Bank Commissioner W. J. Barnett said regulations are prepared for reopening of Oklahoma banks Friday unless the national holiday is extended.

Untermyer Predicts U. S. Exchange Control

Los Angeles, March 8 (A.P.).—The New York Stock Exchange was described today as the most "powerful and despotic institution on earth," by an ancient adversary—Samuel Untermyer, New York corporation lawyer.

Speaking before the law alumni of the University of Southern California, he expressed conviction that the impending special session of Congress will do what he sought to do as early as 1912—put stock exchanges under Government regulation and make them answerable to the courts of law.

Kansas City Live Stock Exchange Will Close

Kansas City, March 8 (A.P.).—Directors of the Kansas City Live Stock Exchange decided today to close the exchange Friday, giving inability to obtain transfers of balances from Chicago banks as the cause. The decision was disclosed by E. W. Elliott, president of the exchange. Efforts will be made to reopen Saturday.

The directors said that since last Saturday approximately $1,000,000 in checks, all for deferred clearance, have been issued and accepted here.

NEW YORK'S SPIRIT IN DECIDED UPTURN

News That Cash Instead of Scrip Is Coming Boosts Business Flow.

New York, March 8 (U.P.).—Heartened by news that real money instead of scrip will constitute the basis of financial comeback, and that more than $10,000,000 in cash was placed in circulation through pay rolls in the city, New York today experienced a psychological upturn of well-defined proportions.

Complex as it still seemed, the financial situation appeared to be struggling out of the morass of uncertainty toward a restoration of normal, or near-normal, activity.

Of further aid in dispelling the feeling of confusion which has prevailed for four days, was the announcement that the Federal Reserve gold backing of the dollar is more than sufficient to forestall abandonment of the gold standard. This backing is such that another $2,000,000,000 in currency could be issued without exceeding the limit prescribed by law.

Insofar as pay checks were concerned, the tendency of the banks was to provide every family with at least sufficient cash to defray living expenses. The Chase National was cashing all pay checks. The National City Bank took care of pay rolls on a restricted basis, providing enough money for immediate necessities in each individual case. The Guaranty Trust had $5,000,000 available for pay rolls. A survey of all the city's banks indicated that at the beginning of business today more than $93,000,000 cash was on hand to take care of pay rolls—sufficient to meet demands several times over.

Meanwhile the National Better Business Bureau warned the public against wildcat schemes. The get-rich-quick Wallingfords, it was indicated, are in full cry, seeking both victims who have hoarded cash and those who have none. They have schemes for getting the cash as well as for obtaining valuable securities by advancing cash at supervertortionate rates.

The decision to abandon the idea of issuing scrip in New York left the clearing house and American Bank Note Co. with a considerable supply of worthless certificates on hand. The cost of printing the scrip, which was started last Sunday, will exceed $100,000, it is believed.

GOVERNORS ANSWER UNITY PLEA AS ONE

Proclamations Galore Ask Universal Support for Roosevelt.

(Associated Press.)

An appeal for national unity, unexampled in peace-time history, was issued yesterday in simultaneous proclamations by the governors of the States.

Acting at the suggestion of a nonpartisan committee, including civic, political and religious leaders and the heads of important national organizations, the State executives asked for a solid front, in this time of trial, behind President Roosevelt and American institutions.

Reports to the committee last night were that every governor had joined in the proclamation except where legal technicalities prohibited it.

The Nation-wide appeal thus presented was the first public result of an endeavor conducted under the chairmanship of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the explorer, to assure the President of the united backing for a program of prompt and decisive action.

Other members of the committee who signed the letter of suggestion to the governors were:

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor; President Henry I. Harriman of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange; Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; George Cardinal Mundelein, Dr. Harry E. Fosdick, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Alfred E. Smith, Newton D. Baker, Nicholas Murray Butler, and Walter Lippmann.

This committee, with the cooperation of hundreds of local agencies throughout the country, expects to continue its efforts, particularly during the coming special session of Congress. In suggesting united action to the governors, the committee declared the ordinary operations of Government might be "too slow" to meet the present emergency.

ENTIRE FLEET LOOKS TO AIR IN WAR GAME

114 Ships Maneuvering Off West Coast; Planes Hold Stage Next Year.

Aboard U. S. S. California at sea, March 8 (A.P.).—The droning of air squadrons today provided a haunting theme song for the combined battle and scouting forces of the United States Navy.

There were 114 fighting craft of all classes except submarines, which were trailing and looking on, in the grand tactical exercises off southern California under command of Admiral Richard H. Leigh, commander in chief of the fleet.

Today the naval aviation squadrons command a greater respect than ever before and naval tactics are being realigned, with the knowledge that this year's maneuvers have developed new and faster destroyers for coast protection, and battle cruisers, of which the Navy has none, are necessary to combat the great aircraft carriers which outstrip all battleships in speed.

Admiral Leigh had revealed that the key problem of next year's maneuvers will be the pitting of a fast naval air raiding force against a powerful fleet.

Defensive formations against submarine attack featured the third day of the tactical exercises.

Los Angeles Prepared To Start Using Scrip

Nearly $50,000,000 has been printed and is ready for use.

Written Procedure Eliminated by President and Correspondents Applaud at Close of Session Lasting 40 Minutes; Executive Frank and Cordial.

President Roosevelt has determined upon far-reaching modification of White House press relations, in the hope that by more informal conferences with newspapermen he may present his thoughts, hopes and plans to the country in comprehensive form as major policies are being shaped.

The President recognizes that in abolishing the old system of having written questions presented in advance, he is undertaking an arrangement which, as he puts it himself, "is impossible." He is hopeful, however, that the confidence of the informal White House interviews will be universally respected to the advantage of all.

In his first conference since his inauguration, Mr. Roosevelt yesterday received some 200 newspapermen at 10 o'clock. The conference extended over some 40 minutes and worked out so well that when it was over the group applauded the President enthusiastically.

Follows Albany Plan.

Following out the plan he said had ruled at Albany during the last four years, Mr. Roosevelt received press questions "on the fly," and undertook to answer them frankly and fully. He warned, however, that when questions were offered relating to undetermined policies, or matters which could not be disclosed for want of complete information, he would be unable to permit the interrogation.

Yesterday's conference was hailed as perhaps the most satisfactory White House news exchange in many years. Whether this frank and informal basis of discussion can be continued remains to be determined by the results of the trial.

Seated at his desk in the Executive Office wing, Mr. Roosevelt received the newspapermen individually. He then announced, in an easy, chatty way, that he had just signed his application for associate membership in the National Press Club. Outlining the general method he hopes to follow in his regular semiweekly press conferences, he quickly came to the startling fact that "I have no news."

A ripple of laughter greeted this remark, and it might well have been a cue for the general exodus. But some one asked a question. Perhaps it was about the message to Congress, or banking plans, or that hardy perennial, balancing the budget. Whatever the particular question, it started the ball rolling, and there followed about a half hour's informal exchange on a wide variety of subjects.

Son Elliott Bids Good-by.

The only interruption served but to emphasize the note of easy informality. Mrs. Roosevelt entered the room to tell the President his son Elliott was leaving for Arizona. Would the President stop to say adieu? The President bid the lad good-by and resumed his discussion of national affairs.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's iron-clad rules is that he will never undertake to answer "If" questions. He did not pause to define an "If" question, but those who have tried them on him in the past were able to offer the explanation. Briefly, an "If" question is, as one of the past-masters at the art explained, "a hypothetical question based upon a probability which no one could possibly know anything about anyhow."

As interpreted by the newspaper corps, Mr. Roosevelt's general policy in the matter thus reduces to a determination not to cross bridges before he comes to them.

To Be Frank in Answers.

Finally, the President will undertake to say, when the occasion demands, "I don't know." If questions come concerning matters on which he is not recently informed, he will feel free to say so.

When questions arise concerning policies still in nebulous form, the President will say frankly, "I can't answer that question today." And that will be that.

Mr. Roosevelt believes that the method he adopts of keeping the country informed on the direction of his thinking may assist greatly in a better understanding of policies and purposes. He solicits the earnest cooperation of the press in this ambition.

DISTRICT BANKS TO RELEASE CASH FOR VITAL NEEDS TODAY

viated by enactment today of emergency legislation.

At present, the Clearing House pointed out, if pay roll checks are cashed, while deposits can not be received in regular checking accounts, the condition would be created under which large amounts of money would be paid out while no money would be deposited. Such a situation, the Clearing House said, is one "which the strongest banking system in the world could not long withstand."

The action of the Clearing House in recommending the disbursement of funds for necessities is a partial adoption of Regulation No. 10, promulgated by the Treasury Department, which permits such withdrawals. The only clauses of this permissive rule which have not been adopted by the local Clearing House are those which permit fund releases for wages, and for the purposes of maintaining employment.

New Rule Held Needed.

The adoption of the remaining provisions of this regulation, particularly that pertinent to wage payment, are the subject of further study by the Clearing House. The belief among informed bankers is that a new regulation in the Treasury Department, allowing the receipt of deposits in regular accounts, would be necessary before this provision may properly be carried out.

In connection with the withdrawal of money for the necessities of life, the Treasury department regulation hold the directors and officers of each banking institution strictly accountable for faithful compliance with its provisions, and enjoins them to take precautions to prevent hoarding and to prevent unnecessary withdrawals.

In a statement issued last night the Clearing House again urged that "every bank in the District of Columbia meet the needs for cash in order to facilitate the receipt and handling of food and feed products." A survey shows that all local banks are permitting the withdrawal of funds for this essential community purpose.

Richmond Promises Aid.

By permitting the withdrawals for essentials, the banks are allowing funds to be taken from their vaults, while no deposits may be received in regular accounts; but such withdrawals, it was said would deplete funds only to a slight degree. On the other hand, it was pointed out, to permit the withdrawals for payment of wages over any extended period of time, would result in a great depletion.

An Associated Press dispatch from Richmond said the Federal Reserve Bank in that city had addressed a communication of all its member banks, including those in the Capital, informing them that the Reserve Bank will replace pay roll funds withdrawn in accordance with Regulation, No. 10.

The instructions which were received yesterday by all Federal Reserve District Banks, permitting them to release funds for essentials requires that the member banks deliver gold or gold certificates to the Reserve Bank in exchange for currency or coin to meet the essentials. In effect, bankers said, this would be a depletion of resources, while the ban is still in effect on receiving deposits.

Present Bank Functions.

In addition to allowing withdrawals for necessities of life and for the expedition of food shipments, the banks are now performing the following functions:

All safe deposit boxes are open and unrestricted access to their safe deposit boxes is accorded customers.

Change is being made freely for the accommodation of customers at all tellers' windows.

All banks are cashing checks drawn on the Treasury of the United States.

Trust departments are operating to the full extent permitted by the Secretary of the Treasury's regulations dealing with such departments.

Customers are being permitted to pay notes, interest and other obligations of theirs.

Customers are being permitted, without restriction (except in the case of gold coin and gold certificates) to withdraw any securities, documents or other property heretofore left with local banks by them for safekeeping.

D.C. COMMISSIONERS SILENT ON DRY ISSUE

Comment Refused and Cash Lacking for Purchase of Rum Evidence.

The District Commissioners were apparently taken unawares by the action of the Prohibition Bureau yesterday and consequently could not predict what steps they might take to enforce the law against the liquor traffic in Washington.

All indications are, however, they can do very little in the matter of closing speakeasies because of the absence of a local prohibition act and lack of money to pay informers.

Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, retiring Police Commissioner, declined to talk until he confers with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Corporation Counsel William W. Bride.

Funds Not Available.

Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman, intimated that he would be opposed to the transfer of other District funds, even if available, for use in paying informers in view of the congressionalt attitude against such practice.

The only local liquor law is the Shepherd act, but partially effective because of the subsequent passage of the Volstead act, according to Mr. Bride.

"The only laws my office is obliged to enforce with regard to liquir traffic," he said, "is that portion of the Shepherd act prohibiting drinking in public and the traffic regulation against driving while drunk."

Police Poor, Too.

Even if the Commissioners should favor the continuation locally of the paid-informer system, they would be at loss as to where to obtain the necessary funds. While the Police Department has a crime-prevention fund, it is so small as to be valueless in a drive against liquor selling.

For a number of years the Police Department has vainly asked Congress for just such a fund to buy information.

Wyoming to Continue Check on Bank Money

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 8 (A.P.).—Gov. Leslie A. Miller announced today that when the presidential bank holiday is ended Wyoming banks will continue for an indefinite period on the basis of limiting withdrawals to 5 per cent.

Vermont to Stop Chain Store Export of Money

Montpelier, Vt., March 8 (A.P.).—Members of the Vermont General Assembly returning to the capitol tonight brought reports to Gov. Stanley C. Wilson that certain companies operating chain stores were making daily shipments of currency to Boston and New York.

The governor gave immediate instructions to officials to devise ways and means for preventing such removal of currency from the State.

Court of Appeals to Act on Application of Former Vice President.

Former Vice President Charles Curtis, who has opened a law office in the Shoreham Building here, will be admitted to practice before the Court of Appeals of the District today. His admittance to the bar will be moved by Attorney Robert I. Miller, a close friend.

Mr. Curtis also has an application pending for admission to the bar of the District Supreme Court. It is probable that the motion to admit him to practice in the lower court will be presented to the justices Monday.

In his application, Mr. Curtis pointed out that he had been a prosecuting attorney in Kansas and that he was admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court in 1904.

SPEAKEASIES' BOOM SEEN IN NEW ORDERS

probably would be an end to effective combating of speakeasies and bootleggers in the District.

Col. Woodstock mentioned the District in his order, saying: "In the District of Columbia the bureau has paid for informers for the Metropolitan Police, without having any control in their selection or over their operations. Some change in method must be found here."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, declined to comment on the order. However, it was learned that he and District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan would confer today on the possibility of using other funds—such as the fund for the "detection and prevention of crime" for the paying of informers and the buying of liquor in speakeasies.

Under the law a raid can be made only after a warrant is sworn before a United States commissioner by a person who has made a liquor purchase. This type of attack against speakeasies in the District will be eliminated unless funds for the paying of informers and for the price of the liquor purchases be forthcoming from some source.

Col. Woodcock said the restriction against buying evidence "will make it virtually impossible for the bureau to be effective against speakeasies in most jurisdictions.

"It is probably a good thing in the long run," he said, "because it will tend to focus attention upon the responsibility of local authorities upon speakeasies and similar violations, and make our work more effective by fixing a more definite objective."

102 Cases of Wiretapping.

Woodcock said that the restriction of wiretapping would only affect the bureau's operations against the larger syndicates. Out of more than 90,000 cases made during the last fiscal year, wiretapping was employed in only 102, he said.

"The new plan," he said, "will also enable us to reduce the force after July 1 to conform to the smaller appropriation without so much loss to enforcement. I confidently believe this bureau can be made to operate more efficiently under the new plan than the old."

The order was sent out five days ago, but no announcement of the change in policy was made until today after incorrect versions were being circulated, the director stated.

$5,000 Gold Hoarder Gives It Up for Silver

Sacramento, Calif., March 8 (A.P.).—Five thousand dollars in gold was brought out of hiding to a bank here today.

Joseph H. Stephens, president of the Merchants National Bank, said a man came into the bank and emptied a sack of gold coins on the counter, asking that it be exchanged for silver. While accommodating him, Stephens asked where he got the gold.

"Well," the man said, "I knew this was coming a year ago so I drew out all my money in gold. But I'm too smart for 'em. I see now that the United States might go off the gold standard, so I want to change this gold for silver."

GERMAK'S REMAINS LIE IN STATE TODAY

Body Is Taken First to His Home on Arrival in Chicago.

Chicago, March 8 (A.P.).—The body of Mayor Anton J. Cermak lay in the darkened parlor of his home today and Chicagoans went about their affairs at a slower tempo after according an impressive tribute to the man who rose from immigrant to mayor.

But one floral piece adorned the casket—a spray of lilies sent by President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The President, for whom the bullet that brought death to Chicago's chief executive was intended, was represented by a military aid, Lieut. Col. Campbell B. Hodges.

Thousands gathered about the depot as the mayor's casket was lowered from the baggage coach, pressed forward when it was carried to the hearse, and thronged the sidewalks when the funeral cavalcade proceeded to the Cermak residence.

Members of Mayor Cermak's family retired with the body while officials completed plans for the city's period of mourning, which officially begins tomorrow and ends when the remains are interred Friday afternoon.

Tomorrow the same group of civic leaders and officers which accompanied the body today will escort it to the City Hall. There, in a corridor and mounted upon a catafalque, it will lie in state until Friday morning, when funeral services will be conducted at the Chicago Stadium.

Miami, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—Improvement was noted today in the condition of Mrs. Joe H. Gill, Miami society woman, wounded by Guiseppe Zangara at the time he shot Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago.

Rolph Extends Banking Holiday in California

Sacramento, Calif., March 8 (A.P.). The Senate banking committee today approved for passage, with amendments, a bill passed by the Assembly yesterday providing for control of State banks under limitations prescribed for the present emergency.

Gov. Rolph at the same time extended the California bank holiday to include Friday and Saturday.

Legislature Gives Cross Financial Dictatorship

Hartford, Conn., March 8 (A.P.).—Dictatorial powers over financial institutions of Connecticut in event of an emergency were given to the governor and State bank commissioner by the Legislature today and signed by Gov. W. L. Cross.

The measure empowers the governor to issue a proclamation bringing all banks under the laws as changed by two other measures yesterday, or he can apply it partly as circumstances may warrant. While the proclamation is in force the bank commissioner may make such rules as he deems necessary to protect financial institutions.

Michigan Professors At Treasury Parleys

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 8 (A.P.).—Prof. I. L. Sharfman, head of the University of Michigan economics department, and Prof. L. L. Watkins and Robert G. Rodkey, university economists, are in Washington consulting with United States Treasury officials, it was revealed tonight.

The Michigan faculty members left for the Capital last night, but their departure was not made public until tonight. An invitation is believed to have come from Washington as a result of a statement issued jointly by them on February 25, in which they advocated a Federal guarantee of bank funds, and predicted the spread of the present holiday—a prediction since borne out.

British Policy Toward Gold Standard Is Same

London, March 8 (A.P.).—The domestic banking emergency in the United States has not changed Great Britain's policy so far as return to the gold standard is concerned, it was learned today from the highest financial quarters in the British Government.

The British policy was reaffirmed thus: While the nation looks forward to an eventual return to gold as the most suitable international standard of value, no return can be contemplated until there is promise of a more workable system than existed just before Britain abandoned gold in the fall of 1931. Broadly speaking, the conditions referred to are stabilization of national currencies, lowering of trade barriers, raising of commodity prices and settlement of the war debts.

BOETTCHER TRIES TO CHOKE SUSPECT

Attempted Attack Follows Recognition of Voice; Wife Has Baby.

Denver, March 8 (A.P.).—Police said Charles Boettcher 2d sought to throttle Arthur Youngberg, suspect in his abduction, in a dramatic meeting late today.

Chief of Police Albert T. Clark brought the two men together in his office after Youngberg had been removed here from the remote South Dakota ranch, where police declare Boettcher was held captive for sixteen days before $60,000 ransom was paid.

Boettcher, Clark said, was in a highly nervous state. He had just come from a hospital where his wife, Anna Lou Boettcher, had given birth to a girl, her second child.

Never Saw Abductors.

"About 8 feet separated the men when the were brought together," Clark said. "Youngberg held his head down. I asked Youngberg if he had ever seen this man (Boettcher) before. Boettcher closed his eyes tightly. He never saw his abductors, you know. He was blindfolded all the time and knew the kidnapers only by the sound of their voices.

"When Youngberg said, 'No, I never seen him in my life,' Boettcher leaped from his chair toward Youngberg with an exclamation, his hands outstretched. With another police officer I seized Boettcher and held him."

Clark declared the meeting of the two men had given hi an "ironclad case" against six persons charged in Federal informations with the kidnaping.

Accent Strong Clew.

Clark declared police are hot on the trail of the two suspects in the case who are still at large.

One of the suspects held here, Carl W. Pearce, 36, Burlington, Colo., insurance salesman, confessed, police said, that he wrote the ransom notes to young Boettcher's wealthy father, Claude K. Boettcher. Pierce said he copied the notes on a typewriter from pencilled notes written by Verne Sankey, 41.

New York Banks Report Gold Hoarders Relent

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—There were evidences today that some gold hoarders with stricken consciences had returned their holdings of the yellow metal to the channels of commerce. Although the exact amounts of gold and gold certificates received by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York during the day were not made public, it was said that the total was "several millions."

While most of the gold was deposited by member banks in exchange for currency, a number of individuals with bags, suitcases and briefcases, in which was gold coin they had been keeping in their homes or in safe deposit boxes, appeared. They exchanged the yellow tokens for Federal Reserve notes.

By GEORGE D. RILEY

THE Federal Diary is going to do its part to drive dull care away. Accordingly, we herewith announce the jigsaw puzzle tournament for Government employes to be held the evening of March 30.

And would you believe it, we've laid practically no plans for the affair. We're taking a chance—a chance that you'll want to forget that dull care, a chance that there'll be 500 entered in competition and a few other chances. So all you need to do to match up is to take a chance too.

Of course, entering the contest costs you nothing. Arrangements have been made with the University Distributing Co., Cambridge, Mass., makers of the "Jig of the Week," to supply 500 sets. Of course, when you're through working the puzzle it becomes yours. And the prizes become yours, if you show the necessary speed and accuracy.

THEME song for the occasion probably will be that chiropractor masterpiece, "Adjusta You and Adjusta Me." And when you get all the little pieces adjusted you may be in the prize-winning list. It'll all depend upon you.

Be the first to enter. You know most of the evening must be given over and a lot of room will be needed, so tell your friends later how sorry you are you didn't enter—that you're sure you could have won. Put your name and confidence in the mail and be among the first. There is a coupon for your convenience.

W. M. Rose, treasurer, University Distributing Co., writes, "Please advise us when you want the puzzles shipped." We've written him. The puzzles all will be alike. And contestants all will start at the same time. But will they finish the same time?

Mrs. Edwina Avery's letter, which appeared Monday, March 6, in your Federal Diary column, is the only sensible statement published in regard to the married persons' clause of the economy act.

Of course, it isn't economy to release married people, who are well qualified for their jobs, just because of their married status which doesn't change their efficiency. In fact, I am assured married people are often more efficient than their less energetic single coworkers, having, as they often do, more responsibilities.

AT the meeting of the Society of Federal Translators Monday evening, March 6, in the Department of Commerce Building, the most important matter discussed was proposed group appeal to the Civil Service Commission for reallocation of translators to "the professional and scientific service, says Johanna Henaoldt Bornsen.

Arguments were presented for and against such an appeal at this time. Owing to existing difference of opinion, it was decided not to put the matter to a vote at this meeting. Regarding the question of establishing credit unions within the American Federation of Government Employes, the society voted in favor of one big union for all District lodges.

The society also voted in favor of establishing postal checking accounts in the United States, as proposed in a bill recently introduced in the Senate by Senator Dill. A new member, Walter E. Claflin, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, was admitted to the society. The entertainment feature was a humorous skit written by the president, B. H. Lamore, and presented by Mr. Lebel and Mr. Rogers.

March, with its first harbingers of spring, again appeals to one's sense of beauty. Let us take Helen Keller's advice—imagine ourselves as seeing this spring as if we should never have sight of another, and so find maximum pleasure in every bud and blossom, landscape or sky-scape. And let us also quickly take thought now of all the flowers that may be planted in spring to furnish a harvest of glory in summer.

American Woman Lingyuan Heroine

American Flags She Made Believed to Have Saved Lives.

Jehol City, Province of Jehol, March 7 (Delayed).—The only American in Jehol, Miss Harriet F. Minns, a mission worker from Buffalo, N. Y., was the heroine during the capture of Lingyuan on March 1.

After Japanese airmen had dropped warnings to foreigners that they must evacuate or else seek bomb-proof shelters, Miss Minns, with her British coworkers, made two American flags by hand. When the bombing started, one flag was hoisted over the mission building and the other was spread over the underground shelter, which Miss Minns had previously prepared.

To this dugout the American marched the Chinese children who were under her care. Evidently observing the flags, the Japanese aviators spared the mission. All missionaries in Jehol Province are safe.

Welch Banker's Release Was Urged by Mayor and Senator Hatfield.

The Mayor of Welch and Senator Hatfield (Republican), West Virginia, were among those who recommended the parole.

Mrs. Roosevelt Holds First Meeting of Official Family

First Lady Also Is Near End of Task of Rearranging White House Furnishings; Policy of Calls Is Yet Undecided.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

While her husband discussed the financial situation with his advisers in the executive offices of the White House yesterday morning Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt held the first meeting of hr official family, Mrs. John Garner, wife of the Vice president, and the ladies of the Cabinet in her sitting room at the White House. All of the Cabinet officers' wives were present except Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, who is not in Washington. It was not announced whether or not regular weekly meetings will be held by Mrs. Roosevelt with her official family, but most of the recent First Ladies have found this system a useful one relating to the official duties and procedures of the official hostesses. No doubt the question of paying and returning calls by the official women were mentioned.

This is always a moot question and one which every First Lady has tried to assist in solving. Mrs. Roosevelt, as wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has had experience in the tax on the time and strength of an official hostess in doing her full prescribed duty in the matter of calls.

Of course, the early mistresses of the White House threshed out this question and it has been a rule for many administrations that the First Lady is exempt from making or returning calls, if it so pleases her, and it has pleased all the First Ladies of recent years. The few exceptions to this rule are, of course, the visits of state with the President visiting reigning royalty and visits of condolence.

Those who have visited the second floor of the White House since the Roosevelt family have become established there are, of course, interested in the changes inaugurated by Mrs. Roosevelt. The Monroe room, which history tells us was the visiting room of Mrs. James Monroe, is used for that purpose by Mrs. Roosevelt, although most of the First Ladies since the Civil War have used the oval room over the blue room.

Mrs. Roosevelt is using the Lincoln room as her workshop and office instead of the office occupied by other President's wives at the east end of the long corridor.

Never has the oval room been so attractive as it is at present fitted up as the study of the President. The triple window looks down on the lawn and the fountain at the end of the grounds and the vista of the monument. This is the airiest and most sunshiny room in the house. The President will use in this study the desk table for years in use in the President's study in the Monroe room and in the Lincoln study arranged by the Hoovers.

This table desk was made from the timbers of Her Majesty's ship Resolute and presented to the United States by Queen Victoria.

Since Mrs. Roosevelt does not use the raised alcove-like room at the end of the corridor for her office it has become an additional living room. The office of the secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheiber, has been established in the wing of this corridor which runs out to the windows above the main entrance of the White House. This was formerly used as a second floor playroom for the various White House children.

The room used by Mrs. Hoover as a sitting room is now President Roosevelt's bedroom. It was in this room that President Wilson first sat and admired the profile of Mrs. Norman Galt, later the second Mrs. Wilson, as she played the accompaniment for Miss Margaret Wilson to sing

Philadelphia Banks Plan Big Scrip Issue

Philadelphia, March 8 (A.P.).—Holding the Treasury Department's plans for currency expansion distinct from the local situation, Philadelphia's banks today went ahead with arrangements for the issuance of scrip.

The clearing house association again held two sessions, ironing out the details of its program to issue $51,250,000 worth of certificates Friday. Delivery from the printers is expected tomorrow. Leading banks opened "guardedly"—literally and figuratively—to cash emergency checks not exceeding $25, to accept "custodianship" of deposits and to make change.

Hoover Feeling Better Since Leaving Office

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Former President Herbert Hoover was reported today to be "feeling more like his old self" than at any time since 1927. One of a long line of visitors calling upon Mr. Hoover to pay their respects and wish him well, who asked that his name not be used, asserted that the former Chief Executive looked "like a new man."

Following a custom while in the White House, Mr. Hoover once more took the time off for exercise early this morning before settling down to work on personal matters and receive visitors.

Improvement Is Noted In Howell's Condition

(Associated Press.)

A "slight improvement" in the condition of Senator Robert B. Howell, of Nebraska, was reported last night from Walter Reed Hospital where he has been under care for pneumonia since February 25.

Hospital attaches said the Nebraska senator had spent "a reasonably comfortable day." Progressive gaining over the pneumonic condition thus was indicated, as reports earlier in the day were that he had spent a "fair night" and that no new complications had arisen.

. . . "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself"

—From President Roosevelt's Inaugural Address, March 4, 1933

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT proclaimed the present bank holiday because public demands, prompted by unreasoning fear, were threatening to put our banks in a position where they could no longer properly serve the people. By his prompt and courageous action he not only averted more serious difficulties but gave us an opportunity to soberly realize the vast individual benefits that are derived from our banking system and the necessity of our wholehearted cooperation in his reconstructive efforts.

We have had the opportunity to remember that:

1. We, the public, put our money into banks for safekeeping.

2. Banks must be reasonably paid for that service.

3. Banks must, therefore, put part of our money to work to earn interest for us, and to pay the bank for protecting us.

4. The law says clearly what part of our money can be so put to work.

5. The banks, by law, put that money to work; they make legal investments to pay our interest and the bank's expenses.

6. At no one time—even peak prosperity—could the banks sell all these securities to pay each of us every dollar—without causing us and our banks great losses.

7. For all of us to ask our banks to pay each of us every dollar at one and the same time, is to force heavy loss upon ourselves as well as our banks.

* * *

We live in the soundest country in the world, under the safest and sanest form of government. In natural resources, energy, inventiveness, citizen-courage and capable, patriotic leadership, we have the means to solve every difficulty and to emerge from the present situation with greater sanity, strength and moral health. Our only need is for the expression of confidence that can be interpreted by normal conduct of our affairs and habits in accordance with the following code:

"Trust your government.

"Trust your banks.

"Do not expect the impossible.

"Do nothing hysterical. If it is normal to carry little cash in your pocket when there is plenty to go round, carry little now. There never was a time when every one on earth could possess all his cash in his pockets, his stocking, his safe-deposit box, or anywhere else.

"Remember that if you try now to get all your cash, you will certainly make matters worse.

"Do not stampede. Do not lose your nerve. Keep your head."*

With the courage that sustained our forebears through the trying periods of five great wars and ten financial panics, the American people will cheerfully accept any regulation that may be put into effect for the greatest good of all our population, at the conclusion of the national bank holiday. They will maintain their usual volume of purchases and show their faith in the leadership of President Roosevelt and in the integrity and stability of American institutions, by placing all available funds where they may be redirected into the channels of business reconstruction.

The American people will not be stampeded by thoughtless cries of fear, but will courageously face the supposed danger and prove that the supposed conflagration is but the gleaming rays of an ascending sun.

*This code has been adapted from the personal statement of Jesse Isidor Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., as published in New York newspapers.

MEETING THE EMERGENCY.

President Roosevelt, after a conference with Congress leaders, announces that he expects the enactment of a bill that will enable banks to open immediately. His message to Congress today will inform the country concerning the present monetary crisis and outline the method by which he proposes to restore normal conditions. The House can organize very quickly, since the Democratic caucus has chosen the officers to be elected. The Senate is ready to act. It is expected that legislation proposed by the President will become law today.

With the new powers conferred upon him by Congress the President can keep a firm grip upon the Nation's gold supply while permitting banks to function. It is believed that an issue of Federal Reserve notes aggregating $2,000,000,000 will be put in circulation. The Federal Reserve banks are said to have an abundance of notes which can be delivered to banks.

An increased demand for currency arises from the inability of the banks to function normally. That demand can be met by the issuance of Federal Reserve notes which are secured by 40 per cent gold and 60 per cent commercial paper or Government bonds. So long as currency is issued on this solid basis there will be no danger of inflation.

The objective toward which President Roosevelt is working is to permit the banks to function normally again. Apparently this can not be done immediately in all cases, but steps toward that end can be taken. Congress might authorize the banks to regulate withdrawals in accordance with their specific needs for protection. Banks might have to limit withdrawal of deposits to 25 or 50 per cent. Under such regulations each bank could protect its depositors.

It would be impossible to issue enough sound currency to take the place of bank checks, which serve as money in the ordinary course of business. Bank deposits, even at their present low level, amount to about $40,000,000,000. The largest volume of currency ever outstanding is now in use, but it amounts to only about $7,000,000,000. The Government could not possibly issue enough sound currency to make up the difference between this volume of currency and the bank credit which is ordinarily used as money. It is of the utmost importance that checks should pass current, up to a reasonable percentage of deposits.

President Roosevelt has not revealed his attitude toward the guarantee of bank deposits, but various leaders on Capitol Hill are busy with schemes to throw the credit of the Government behind the banks. It would be unwise to inject this issue into the situation.

Mr. Roosevelt is striving to bring the country out of this crisis with as little disturbance of natural processes as possible. Nevertheless, bold action is essential. The country will be ready to support any plan that will loosen the flow of credit and money while preserving the soundness of the dollar and safeguarding the future against another drain on gold.

TIME RIPE FOR ECONOMY.

Aside from the edicts on the banking situation, the most encouraging news that has come from the White House since the inauguration is the report that President Roosevelt is pushing forward an economy program. Lewis W. Douglas, the new Director of the Budget, has been requested to speed up his program of cutting down expenditures and reorganizing the Government service. Apparently some immediate action is contemplated.

For more than two years business and industry have been waiting for the Government to set its financial house in order. Conditions have now reached such a state that Federal economy becomes imperative. Indications are that President Roosevelt intends to begin slashing expenditures as a means of building up confidence to support his banking program. No more effective action to quiet the unrest of the public could be taken.

Two rich fields for economy are open to the new administration. President Hoover gave his successor an excellent opportunity to make large savings in the 1934 budget by vetoing the independent offices supply bill. This measure must be submitted again to the new Congress. In the meantime if Mr. Roosevelt can secure legislation that will eliminate the grave abuses from veterans' compensation laws, this supply bill can be trimmed down by several hundred millions of dollars. Cooperation of Congress will be necessary, however. The last session granted Mr. Roosevelt broad powers to reorganize the Government, but he has no authority to cut down veterans' allowances. But if he demands that a cut shall be made, Congress may heed him.

Probable savings from reorganization of bureaus and the elimination of dead branches of the Government can not be estimated. But they may be considerable. It will be some time before this source of economy can be reflected in the expenditures of the Government, but realization that retrenchment is definitely under way will have a stimulating influence upon business.

Savings in one quarter will lead to economies in another. If the Government balances its budget by trimming down expenditures, it may be able to refund at lower interest rates a large volume of bonds that are coming due in the near future. Interest on the national debt and allowances to veterans have been regarded as untouchable items in previous budgets because Congress refused to put Government finance on a sound basis and to reduce veterans' doles. If President Roosevelt can cut through the political fetishes that hampered Mr. Hoover he will have no difficulty in fulfilling his campaign pledge of reducing Federal expenditures by 25 per cent.

A SECOND BONUS MARCH.

An ominous warning of trouble for the new administration is contained in the announcement that plans for a second "bonus expedition" to Washington is under way. According to the promoters of this expedition a large number of veterans will assemble here on May 12 for a demonstration on May 15, when a petition will be presented to Congress. The invaders will demand immediate payment of the bonus, maintenance of the present doles to veterans, and relief for the unemployed. It is the plan of the agitators to keep the destitute veterans in Washington until their demands have been met.

Because of the eviction of the marchers last summer no attempt was made to conduct a second march on Washington during the administration of President Hoover. The agitators do not know what attitude President Roosevelt will take toward a bonus siege. But they see in the change of administration an opportunity to bring about another crisis in Washington.

A second bonus army encamped in Washington could not be more tolerable than the first one. The District is not equipped to care for a horde of destitute men whose only business here would be to stir up trouble. Conditions among the visitors would again become unbearable. The police would again be called upon to maintain order, and if they were unable to do so it would again be necessary to call upon the Army, regardless of the desire of President Roosevelt to maintain friendly relations with the veterans.

Only wasted effort, disappointment and perhaps tragedy can follow in the wake of the proposed bonus march. Congress can not and will not yield to intimidation. The President can not allow the Treasury to be emptied for the benefit of a special class. Every reasonable effort should be made to avert this invasion before it begins. If the rank and file of veterans can be made to realize that their quest would be hopeless as well as unpatriotic they may repudiate the agitators who are sponsoring this scheme.

An emphatic word from President Roosevelt to the effect that bonus legislation can not be approved would turn the proposed march on Washington into a fiasco. With the support of congressional leaders, the President could save thousands of deluded former soldiers from hardships, wasted efforts and disappointment.

JEHOL PASSES.

Another chapter in the Japanese conquest of Manchuria has come to its end. With the occupation of Kupeikow, the Great Wall gateway to Peiping, the addition of Jehol to Manchukuo was completed, and interest now turns to the future plans of the conquering Japanese army. Announcement that the campaign contemplates no advance south of the wall is received in China with skepticism. Japanese authorities intimate that if Japanese residents of the Peiping district are endangered by the retreating Chinese army a further advance may be necessary.

The world has become suspicious of Japan's professions and discovers that many incidents are readily prepared to excuse her acts. If the scope of Japan's ambition includes the rich Peiping-Tientsin district there is little doubt that plausible reasons will be forthcoming to justify a further military advance. That such a move into the territory patrolled by foreign troops, where so many European and American interests are located, would be fraught with more potential dangers than the occupation of all of Manchuria, can readily be appreciated by the most casual observer.

For the moment, at least, Japanese forces rest on the Great Wall. They now control this ancient fortification for a distance of 250 miles, from the Inner Mongolia border to the Yellow Sea. There, 65 miles northeast of Peiping, they overlook the international treaty area that China fears may be the next objective. The Great Wall, built in the third century B. C. to repel Tartar hordes, was no protection against modern warfare. With the fall of this ancient stronghold Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, last of the Manchurian war lords, sends his resignation to Nanking, protesting his unfitness to continue in command and asking that a capable successor be appointed. He had little help from other leaders of rival factions and under present conditions there is no hope that the Chinese can offer effective resistance to the fulfillment of Japan's plans, whatever they may be.

THE DISTRICT COMMITTEE.

Senator King, of Utah, takes over the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee from Senator Capper, of Kansas. For 16 years Senator King has been a member of this committee. He has taken much interest in local affairs. People of the District hope that, as chairman of the committee, he will be as faithful a friend to the National Capital as Senator Capper has been.

Washington is what Congress makes it. The authority of the District Commissioners is extremely limited. For virtually all of its municipal policies the District must look to Congress. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, to have at the head of the Senate and House District committees men who are in sympathy with Washington as the Capital of the United States. The District has frequently been handicapped by the provincial views of congressmen who think that the Federal City should be operated on a scale comparable to a county seat in the great open spaces, and who try to make local taxpayers carry the cost of maintaining the National Capital.

The choice of Senator Couzens, of Michigan, to be a member of the District committee is an excellent one. As a former mayor of Detroit he is experienced in municipal affairs and may be expected to approach Washington's problems from the metropolitan viewpoint. It is encouraging, indeed, to find the Senate choosing some members of the District committee because of their special qualifications.

A number of local problems may be settled by the Seventy-third Congress, among them the fiscal relationship between the District and the Federal Government. It is to be hoped that the Bureau of Efficiency may complete its study of this subject before it passes out of existence on June 1, and that its findings may serve to guide the new Congress. Senator King would be doing a favor to the District as well as to his own committee to make certain that this report will not be lost.

Pacifists squeak and gibber in the streets when they hear that Commodore Swanson insists on a Navy equal to any other. Give 'em the gun, Commodore!

If Congress intends to guarantee bank deposits it should include a section guaranteeing efficient and honest management of banks.

The world economic conference will kindly wait until Uncle Sam fastens the strap about his wallet.

They talk of a recess of Congress after enacting emergency legislation. What—no beer?

A BRITISH ARGENTINA?

From the New York Sun.

In all discussions of British imperial preference the interests of Argentina, where Britons have a large financial stake, have been the cause of dispute, and a strong opinion in the United Kingdom has consistently urged that in whatever arrangement might be made for empire solidarity these must be protected. The Ottawa agreements were as inimical to Argentina as to other nations; this is recognized in London, and numerous methods of benefiting the republic have been put forward. Among these is one by Sir Arthur Samuel that Argentina "become a full-fledged member of the British Empire." How serious the author of this was appears to be in doubt, but the Argentines took it seriously, the newspaper La Prensa particularly, and resented it. This led the London Spectator to say:

"But suppose Sir Arthur had said associated instead of full-fledged? Might it not be equally to the advantage of the Argentine and ourselves that she should share in some measure in those reciprocal trade advantages which, since Ottawa, can only be extended in full to members of the empire? Is it not precisely to secure some such end as that that the Argentine mission has been visiting England? After all, her traditional relations with Britain, socially and economically, have resembled those of a dominion. We have put more capital into the country than into Canada. She needs our market and we need hers. The friendly relations between the two countries are deeply rooted. Supposing Sir Arthur had suggested the election of the Argentine to honorary membership of the empire, with full trading advantages, would La Prensa have looked upon the proposal more favorably? There is much to be said in all seriousness for widening the scope of the Ottawa agreements, bringing in any countries that would associate themselves with us on a low-tariff basis."

Perhaps the amiable words of the Spectator will contribute to overcome the antagonism of the Argentines; perhaps the suggestion that Argentina may share the advantages of the Ottawa bargains by assuming honorary membership in the British Empire may not be so pacifying as its proponent obviously intends it to be. It is interesting to recall what the "position and mutual relation" of Great Britain and the dominions is as defined in the Balfour report of 1926: "They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

THE NEW VERSION OF AN OLD LINE.

I knew him when he didn't have a dollar to his name!
That's the way we used to say it years ago;
I knew him long before he'd come to fortune or to fame.
I knew him when we used to call him Joe.
But the times have strangely altered and that line is in reverse.
Now the popular amusement is to swear
As we meet some sad-eyed brother without money in his purse:
"I knew him when he was a millionaire!"

I knew him when he lived near us upon the self-same street.
I knew him when he didn't have a dime.
I knew him when his mother scrubbed to get him food to eat,
But we've come upon a very different time.
A curious thing has happened and we're poor of purse once more
And we meet an old acquaintance and declare:
"He is selling little trinkets, canvassing from door to door,
And I knew him when he was a millionaire."

I knew him when he only had one shirt to call his own.
I knew him when his uncles and his aunts
Used to swear that in some prison he would land when he was grown.
I knew him when his mother patched his pants.
Now the busy "knew-him-whenners" have reversed their stock in trade,
And you'll hear this bit of gossip everywhere:
"What a change in his position has the market upset made!
I knew him when he was a millionaire!"

If Man Can Teach His Dog Tricks, Why Not Teach Himself a Few?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THERE is a popular belief that character is formed for good or ill in the first sixteen years of life.

If that were true in all cases, none would reform or "go to the bad" in later years, and life after sixteen would be secure against temptation or altogether hopeless.

But there are innumerable exceptions. In every community there are people who have changed their way of life long after reaching maturity. The decent have become vile and the vile have become decent.

In the majority of such cases, perhaps, the change is the work of environment or circumstance—wealth, poverty, injustice, religion, accident or hard experience. In such cases the individual does not change his character; it is changed for him.

But the fact of change after maturity indicates that character-building is a continuous and life-long process, and the reasonable inference is that the individual can effect the change by his own efforts if he so desires.

How shall he go about it? By adopting the process that developed the race.

Men did not invent ethical standards because they wished to be good. They saw the need of certain rules, such as the one that forbids lying, and adopted them as a matter of expediency. When experience proved the rules good and custom made them sacred, man decided they were moral. Necessity is the mother of convention as of invention.

If the individual would build a better character, let him develop a sense of honor. That is all he needs.

At first he must force himself to be honorable—to do this because it is just and refuse to do that because it isn't square. But each avoidance of dishonor will make the next a little easier, and soon the practice of deceny will become a habit.

Robert Burns learned to fall in love by "going through the motions" until pretense developed into reality. So the striking of blows in play can develop the rage that commonly suggests blows. Nature is easy to fool.

When the practice of honor becomes a habit, the habit is supported and justified by a new state of mind and the state of mind is character.

Character is the whole sum of habits, and it is quite possible to select habits instead of absorbing them unawares.

POLITICAL COMMENT

A Woman in the Cabinet.

Houston Post.

A phase of the "new deal" which President Roosevelt is instituting which has received too scant attention, doubtless because of the excitement over startling events of the past few days, is the inclusion of a woman in the membership of the President's Cabinet. Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, bears the distinction of being the first woman to sit in the Cabinet of a President of the United States. Needless to say, the appointment of Miss Perkins to the Labor post is the supreme political recognition that has been accorded to women since the nineteenth amendment was adopted.

The entrance of Miss Perkins into the Cabinet undoubtedly marks the beginning of a new era for women in the political life of the country. The political equality of women with men, which the nineteenth amendment authorized, will become more of a reality.

Action!

Cincinnati Enquirer.

The events of a dramatic week-end; events coming with startling rapidity in the first thirty-six hours after his inauguration, already have tested the temper of the new Chief Executive and the strength of his will to action. There is no hesitancy here, no waiting upon words, no opportunism. President Roosevelt has struck vigorously at the first great emergency to face him. The example of his leadership is contagious. As a result there is new hope and courage in the hearts of the people.

Speaker Rainey.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

For the fourth time since the beginning of the century, the Speakership of the National House of Representatives has gone to the Mississippi Valley—for the second time to Illinois. "Uncle Joe" Cannon followed Speaker Henderson, of Iowa, in 1903, and he in turn gave way to Champ Clark, of Missouri. Now it is Floor Leader Rainey, of the Twentieth Illinois District, who has been chosen to fill that important post.

Mr. Rainey takes to the Speakership long years of service and acknowledged legislative ability. If he has been found on the conservative side at times—as one-time advocate of the sales tax, for instance—it is none the less true that he has been an opponent of high tariffs and has worked for social legislation. More progressive than his predecessor, Vice President Garner, Mr. Rainey has, moreover, pledged himself to full support of President Roosevelt in his efforts to bring about the new deal. His announcement that a steering committee will shape the policies of the new House means that he has no ambition to make the Speakership the autocratic post it was under the Longworth regime.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bald Eagle Not Well Represented on National Coins—Emblem Should Be Given Some Meaning.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American bald eagle, our national emblem, should be given a fair showing on our silver coins, but he has never had it. No one ever saw him take the pose shown on our half-dollar. As shown in flight, on the quarter, he is made to resemble a farm-yard fowl, for the eagle flaps his wings only as he rises from a catch; he soars. Why spread his wings at all, on so small a surface? Standing on limb or crag he personifies dignity, power, resourcefulness. Self-contained and unafraid, he certainly does typify our national life, but all this is lost in any pose that has been allowed to him, so far.

Outlined in modest relief, as was the head on our former five-cent piece, with a milled edge high enough to protect him from unnecessary abrasion, which would also protect the date and anything else in the design, we would have an emblem which carries some purpose besides being merely a figure on the coin. The writer enjoys the recollection of an aerie where a brood of these splendid birds were bred yearly. The loss of an occasional lamb never demanded their extinction by the farmers there.

The Indian head and the buffalo, on our present nickel, offer such an aggressive relief that they are unstackable. A higher edge would relieve that condition and also reduce the abrasion.

ARTHUR GIBSON MORSE.

Thinks Seventy-second Congress Redeemed Itself by Passing Repeal Resolution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Despite the many shortcomings of the Seventy-second Congress, it went far to elevate itself in popular esteem during its closing days when it set in motion the twenty-first amendment to eradicate the eighteenth amendment from the Constitution.

The Constitution will again return to its original position—a perpetual charter of Government principles; setting forth the people's rights; the people's inherent power to rule themselves, and the people's mastery over those whom the people select to direct and control the peoples' affairs.

The attempt to govern the American people through the meddlesome activities of self-appointed guardians has dismally failed. The good people—the solid substantial citizenship of the United States—have caused Congress and many State Legislatures to do what they have already done. The ratification of the twenty-first amendment will soon reach the proportions of a grand triumphal march from State to State. The States of the North, South, East and West will vie with each other in bringing about the repeal of prohibition.

Admiral Byrd Explains Objectives of National Economy League.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In some quarters intense efforts are being made to spread the false idea that the only purpose of the National Economy League is to oppose payments to veterans not disabled in the war. That is only one purpose of the league's program. In these days of the cruel burdens imposed upon the citizen in his private life by the economic crisis, the costs of government all along the line must be adjusted downward in proportion to the reduced income of the people. In the persistent pursuit of this aim we stand for the preservation of the essential functions of government, including health, education, justice and the protection of life and property. It is the nonessential and the wasteful that we seek to eliminate in all agencies of government, local State and Federal.

In my opinion, the time has arrived when all sound elements of the Nation without regard to party must stand behind the President and the Congress in reducing the cost of the Federal Government in order to maintain unimpared the Nation's credit. The inspiration of the conquest of this vital objective will carry forward toward tax reduction in every State and local unit of government, thus laying the foundation for a real increase in employment in this country.

R. E. BYRD,
National Chairman.

Uncle Sam Not Isolated When It Comes to Helping Out in Disasters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The claim of one of your correspondents that the United States has never been guilty of "isolation" reads like good common sense.

My idea of isolation may be all wrong, but as far as I can remember whenever big earthquakes or floods or famines have struck the earth there never has been any isolation to keep us from extending a helping hand.

When Europe got groggy and was gasping for us to break the Kaiser's strangle-hold and we came across with men and money and Liberty bonds till it hurt, I can't see where there was any isolation then.

We are not so isolated that the Europeans won't have a chance to talk about bad debts and big or little armies and navies with our new President in a little while.

Just now as far as I can see this country is not so very isolated in the Japanese-Chinese mix-up.

The real fact is that Uncle Sam is too good-natured and too good a sport to keep himself aloof from humankind.

What I am always afraid of is that in his dealings with unisolated Europe he may be too good a sport for the future good of his own government.

Letters of a Capital Society Divorcee to Her Mother

Dearest Mother: Today I helped at a charity booth in the hotel lobby and I gathered a lot of very entertaining gossip. A woman here for her second divorce says her first husband always referred to her second husband as his husband-in-law. And wrote her a very indignant letter that her second should have treated her badly, when the break came.

I also heard something killing about a girl, who just left. I met her several times and she was always with another girl who, like herself, was divorcing a college professor. They were just like shadows the whole time and now I hear that the friend married the other's husband as soon as she got back. I imagine the first wife knew all along, as it is not easy to keep a secret here. If that isn't modern enough!

Then a judge told me that a few weeks ago he performed two divorces and a marriage of the two persons within 11 minutes. He got his divorce first, and while she was getting hers he went downstairs and got the marriage license.

Another record case for speed is the very diminutive elevator girl in the office building where my lawyer is. She got a divorce, married the same day, and the next day was divorced from the second husband. You know for Nevada residents there is a 24-hour divorce law.

Clare's fiance told her tonight on the telephone that he is sending out her ring air-mail special delivery. She gets through and leaves Monday. He also said that a newspaper at home called him up yesterday and said, "We understand you are going to be married. Is that right?" To which he replied, "Go on and publish what you like and see how you get sued." Clare is in a state at the possibility of having her wedding announced before she gets her divorce. She thinks her family would die.

Divorce, divorce, is there anything else in the world? I don't remember the time when I ever discussed or heard discussed anything else.

ELIZABETH.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

ONE should say a word for cotton about now for several reasons. Of course, the day's past when any one wears this or that for patriotic or altruistic reasons—unless the article is becoming. Well, it is both patriotic and pleasant to wear cottons this summer!

Have you looked seriously at the new cotton materials? If you do, you will wonder why you haven't worn them all the time! Because they are simply lovely—and no velvet or silk was ever more elegant!

In price they aren't a bit cheaper than silk, either, which may account for why l'elegante doesn't mind wearing cotton at all these days, so I can't plead for cotton for any economical reason. And while these expensive cotton weaves and designs do wash, it is best not to wash them—the same can be said of chiffon, crepe de chine and, in fact, all flat silks. They do wash, but no one wants to wash them, preferring to send them to be cleaned. Well, beautiful cotton fabrics are in the same class, especially those for evening wear.

What Today Means

"PISCES."

IF March 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 12:20 p. m., from 5 p. m. to 6 p. m. and from 8:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 10:20 a. m. and from 3 p. m. to 3:45 p. m.

You may be able to have your own way on this March 9 by forcing others to your way of thinking through sheer forcefulness of character. Take care lest you prove yourself your own worst enemy. Influences operating this day are of a nature as will lead children to resist all kinds of authority. They will appear to go out of their way to act disobediently. A rather gay day for social activities.

The child born on this March 9 will be slow to develop. They will seem to lag behind other children of their own age and will fail to show the initiative and daring that others do. At school they will in all probability do little more than just get by. When they reach maturity, they will spurt forward and will no longer be laggards in the race.

If March 9 is the date of your birth, you are most likely a person fired with ambition and a "desire to win." You may not lead the field, but you will never stop trying to. You are an enthusiastic person, and your enthusiasms are sincere and of long duration; they are seldom quick to dim. You have great tenacity of purpose and you are possessed of great physical and moral courage.

Fifth Avenue Fashions

ISN'T this an attractive little rig for home wear?

The dress is so trim and neat, and there is a slenderizing inverted plait at the center-front.

The most interesting thing about it is the way the smart butcher apron buttons onto the dress. It is so easily slipped off to answer a ring of the doorbell.

Myriads of lovely cottons would make up charmingly in this style. Blue and white tweedy cotton made the original with plain white—so smart this season for trims.

Style No. 2505 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust.

Size 36 requires 3 yards of 39-inch material with 1¾ yards of 35-inch contrasting and 4¾ yards of ruffing. Price of pattern, 15 cents.

In addition, it contains the most interesting illustrated articles—Beauty Hints, Hairdressing, How to Reduce Sensibly, Poise as an Aid to Fashions, Dressmaking Hints, &c.

WAY IS STILL SOUGHT TO OPEN GRAIN MART

Morgenthau Calls Another Session Today to Work on Emergency Plan.

(Associated Press.)

Efforts to reopen the grain exchanges in advance of the reopening of banks were abandoned yesterday at a conference called by Henry Morgenthau, jr., chairman of the Farm Board.

The group decided to continue in session today, however, in an effort to work out an emergency plan for releasing contracts for future delivery of wheat now held by the board with which the millers may hedge sales of flour in the meanwhile.

Complete reopening making possible transactions in both cash wheat and futures was found unfeasable because of the refusal of the Treasury to relax bank regulations to bring this about immediately.

Representatives of millers said the industry may be forced to shut down because of the crippling of the exchanges as millers now are unable to sell flour on their customary basis, which involves hedging sales by purchases of wheat for future delivery. In some cases millers have reduced their sales to minor volumes.

Milling representatives said that the board's holding of futures, more than 30,000,000 bushels, mostly for delivery in May, would provide a sufficient volume of hedging purchases to keep their business in operation for about a month.

Morgenthau then centered the conference on an attempt to ascertain if the board could dispose of its futures without reopening of the exchanges. He said both "legal and practical difficulties" were found to prevent this and that the conference today will "seek some way around these difficulties."

Mail Patrons Protest Dry Agent as Carrier

(Associated Press.)

An investigation of the recent transfer of Irving Windsor from the post of prohibition agent at Salisbury, Md., to that of rural route carrier at the Hurlock, Md., postoffice was asked yesterday by Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland.

The transfer was made, it was said at Mr. Goldsborough's office, at the close of the Hoover administration and has resulted in complaints from some of Mr. Goldsborough's constituents, who dislike to have their mail delivered by a former prohibition agent. Mr. Goldsborough made his request for an investigation to the Postoffice Department.

Cash Awaits 51 Charming Girls to Be Selected by The Washington Post to Form Court of Honor at World Fair.

Despite the bank holiday more than $10,000 in cash is still awaiting the successful candidates in The Washington Post's search for 51 charming girls to inaugurate the Century of Progress International Exposition at Chicago on June 1. Five thousand dollars will be paid to the girl who is selected as queen and $3,000 and $2,000, respectively, to two other girls who will be appointed first and second ladies-in-waiting to the queen.

Forty-eight other girls will compose the queen's court of honor and will share equally in an elaborate program of entertainment during a two week's stay at Chicago's finest hotels. Beautiful gowns also will be provided for each girl and every other expense, including that of transportation from their homes and return, will be paid by The Washington Post and the Chicago Tribune.

Selections of the 51 girls will be made from photographs that may be entered in the contest by either the candidate in person or by any friend or relative. PLUMMER GUILTY IN HIJACKING CASE

Judge Reduces Sentences of Felons Who Helped Convict "Bootleg King."

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., March 8.—Reduction of prison sentences for three men whose testimony aided in the conviction today of William Plummer in connection with the hijacking of prohibition investigators last September was ordered by Judge W. Calvin Chestnut in the United States District Court.

The reductions were recommended by the Federal Grand jury which indicted Plummer after it had heard the testimony of Joseph McCaffrey, Louis Brown, alias William Carley, and Henry G. Carter, who pleaded guilty last December to their part in the hijacking.

Plummer was found guilty by a jury of assaulting Federal officers, transportation and possession of liquor, while Ben Tyler, negro on trial with him, was acquitted on charges of transportation of liquor, the only charge against him.

Plummer first was implicated in the case when William R. Blandford, deputy prohibition administrator for Washington, testified at the hearing before Judge Chestnut in connection with the sentencing of McCaffrey, Brown and Carter.

Blandford, who said that Plummer was the king of Calvert County bootleggers and the best informer he ever had, told the court that Plummer gave the tip which led to the seizure by Federal officers of the liquor later hijacked.

Immediately after the verdict was rendered, Philander B. Briscoe, attorney for Plummer, asked that sentence be deferred pending a motion for a new trial. The maximum sentence is seventeen years in prison and a fine of $20,000.

Montgomery Red Cross Unit to Meet March 30

The annual meeting of the Montgomery County Chapter of the American Red Cross will be held March 30 at Rockville High School, it was announced yesterday. Among the important items to be transacted is election of officers.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent of schools; Mrs. J. Somerville Dawson, chairman of the nursing committee, and a representative from each of the three county branches will act as a nominating committee. Accounts of F. Bache Abert, treasurer of the chapter, have been audited and found satisfactory, according to George W. Davis.

73D CONGRESS WILL MEET AT NOON TO DEAL WITH CRISIS

crats will have a membership of 58 against 36 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite, with one vacancy to be filled by a Democrat. In the House the Democrats will have a large majority, 313 to 117 Republicans with five Farmer-Laborites.

Representative Henry T. Rainey (Democrat), of Illinois, veteran legislator and party battler, will be elected Speaker. Other officers of the House and party leaders will be elected.

Vice President Garner, who left the House Speakership to assume the duties of President of the Senate, will preside over that body, on the floor of which Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, former Democratic nominee for Vice President, will act as party leader.

Quick action has been promised by party leaders in both House and Senate on any emergency legislation President Roosevelt may propose. The President is to outline his proposals in a special message, which will be read to the House and Senate this afternoon.

Although considerable doubt had been expressed through the day about the possibility of getting any legislation through Congress today, President Roosevelt apparently won both Democratic and Republican leaders over to agreement with his proposal at a conference in the White House last night.

Democratic leaders left the conference with confident predictions that the emergency measure would be enacted today. They included some who had a few hours previously expressed hope but doubt about their ability to do so. Republican leaders left the conference with private statements that they would not oppose the emergency proposals. Not all of the Republicans went overboard in their private predictions of immediate passage, but some of the most important said they did not see how Republicans could stand in the way of anything that the new Democratic President proposed, in view of the national emergency.

It is contemplated that the meeting convening today shall be a brief one, designed to handle only emergency legislation, after which there shall be taken a recess of a few weeks during which more far-seeing legislation shall be drafted.

The House today is expected to organize only a few of its many committees, among them being the Ways and Means, Rules, Accounts, Appropriations, and Banking and Currency Committees, and perhaps Agriculture.

House Democrats met in party caucus yesterday and nominated their new appointees to the Ways and Means Committee which serves as the party's committee on committees and shall also serve as the party steering committee until such time as the new party steering committee is named.

Split Among Democrats.

That there will be difficulties in the Democratic House ranks before the present Congress dies was plainly indicated at the caucus. The party developed into a contest between the liberal and conservative wings of the party, the former group, headed by Speaker-elect Rainey, Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, floor leader, and Representative Thomas J. Cullen, of New York, assistant floor leader, and the latter group headed by the friends and supporters of Representative John McDuffie, of Alabama, who was defeated by Representative Rainey in the recent fight for the party's nomination for Speaker.

The fight came over the selection of party members to be named to the ways and means committee. The Rainey-Byrns-Cullen group named three out of the four men they wanted. The McDuffie camp named one.

Representative Ashton C. Shallenberger, of Nebraska, who received 178 votes; Representative John W. Boehne, jr., of Indiana, who got 149 votes, and Representative Charles West, of Ohio, who got 157 votes, were the three candidates who were named by the so-called liberal element now in control of the Democratic party in the House.

McClintic Defeats Burch.

Representative James V. McClintic, of Oklahoma, who was a McDuffie supporter, was named with 144 votes, which was one more than the 143 received by Representative Thomas G. Burch, of Virginia, who had been sponsored by the liberal group. The unexpected entry of Representative Byron B. Harlan, of Ohio, who polled 22 votes, upset the liberal group's plan to name all four of the new members. Other candidates for the committee and the votes they polled were: Representative E. E. Cox, Georgia, 115; Patrick J. Boland, of Pennsylvania, 92, and Michael J. Hart, of Michigan, 92.

Republicans of the House will meet at 10:30 this morning to name their committee members for the new House. One of the most interesting features of this will be the reading out of the party organization of Representative Louis T. McFadden, of Pennsylvania, because of his repeated and severe attacks on former President Hoover and former Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and others. Representative George P. Darrow, of Pennsylvania, is going to do the reading out simply by not nominating Mr. McFadden for any committee.

Over in the Senate the Democratic steering committee named the chairmen of the Senate committees for the new Congress. Organization of the Senate had been almost completed at its meeting on March 4. The House, which has not been in session, will have to go through the routine of organization.

Senate Chairmen.

Agriculture, Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina; Appropriations, Carter Glass, of Virginia; Audit and Control, James W. Byrnes, of South Carolina; Banking and Currency, Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida; Civil Service, M. M. Logan, of Kentucky; Claims, Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina; Commerce, Hubert D. Stephens, of Mississippi; District of Columbia, William H. King, of Utah; Education and Labor, David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Enrolled Bills, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas; Expenditures, J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois; Finance, Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Foreign Relations, Key Pittman, of Nevada; Immigration, Marcus Coolidge, of Massachusetts; Indian Affairs, Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana; Interoceanic Canals, William P. Gore, of Oklahoma; Interstate Commerce, Clarence C. Dill, of Washington; Irrigation and Reclamation, Sam G. Bratton, of New Mexico; Judiciary, Henry W. Ashurst, of Arizona; Library, Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky; Manufactures, Robert Bulkley, of Ohio; Military Affairs, Morris Sheppard, of Texas; Mines and Mining, William J. Bulow, of South Dakota; Naval Affairs, Park Trammell, of Florida; Patents, Robert Wagner, of New York; Pensions, George McGill, of Kansas; Postoffices and Post Roads, Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee; Printing, Carl Hayden, of Arizona; Privileges and Elections, Walter F. George, of Georgia; Public Buildings and Grounds, Tom Connally, of Texas; Public Lands and Surveys, John B. Kendrick, of Wyoming; Rules, Royal S. Copeland, of New York, and Territories, Millard Tydings, of Maryland.

LAST OF FISHERMEN RESCUED FROM FLOE

Three Dogs Perish, but Men Saved in Ice Cruise on Lake Superior.

Ashland, Wis., March 8 (A.P.).—The rescue of George La Rocque and Ollie Sandstrom near Little Girl Point, Mich., accounted tonight for the late two of a score of Madeline Island fishermen who were known to have been set adrift shortly before noon today on a large block of ice in Lake Superior.

While fifteen fishermen were taken off in small boats and others leaped across the widening crack as the ice broke away from shore off the Madeline and Sand Islands, La Rocque and Sandstrom were carried slowly out of sight.

After drifting nearly 50 miles across the Lake Superior Bay, the marooned men were sighted by rescuers who stood for hours on the shore at Little Girl Point where boats were kept in readiness on the bare chance that they might drift ashore there.

Three dogs perished during the dangerous ride. They slipped into the water, along with a light sleigh and fishing equipment, when the waves broke large fissures in the floating ice. La Rocque and Sandstrom saved themselves by leaping onto the larger pieces of ice when the edges began to crumble.

The Coast Guard cutter Crawford of Two Harbors, Minn., meanwhile was cruising cautiously through the drift ice in the bay in search of the rescued men and others whose absence might not have been reported immediately.

EXPORTS OF GRAIN LESS DURING WEEK

Winnipeg Prices of Wheat Declines; New York Joins Buyers.

(Associated Press.)

Grain exports last week from the United States amounted to 618,000 bushels against 772,000 bushels the previous week and 1,011,000 bushels during the corresponding week of last year.

Commerce Department figures yesterday gave the following comparisons between last week's exports and those for the week before: Wheat, 218,000 bushels against 4,000 bushels; barley, 246,000 against 381,000; corn, 74,000 against 339,000; oats, 80,000 against 58,000; rye, none against 10,000.

Canadian grains exported last week from United States ports amounted to 1,238,000 bushels against 808,000 bushels the previous week, while exports of North American wheat flour were 70,000 barrels against 55,000 barrels the previous week.

Winnipeg, March 8 (A.P.).—Eastness at Liverpool, coupled with moderate hedging pressure, accounted for a dip of ¾ cent in wheat prices in early trading on the grain market today. At the low points, however, fair buying for New York and Southern account was uncovered and prices at one time came back to the previous closing levels.

Nearing the midsession period values were holding steady, ⅛@¼ cent lower; May option at 51, July 52⅛ and October 53⅜.

Pit trading from the start was rather draggy and, as offerings were on a much lighter scale than during the past few days, it took little in the way of support to bring values back from bottom levels. No exports were reported.

Liverpool wheat opened lower due to renewed pressure of Argentine afloat wheat and cheaper Canadian offers and quotations near the close were ¼@⅝d lower. Buenos Aires wheat opened ⅛ cent lower.

NEW YORK.

SUGAR—Raw was less active today, but it developed that the previously additional sales were made of about 300,000 bags of Cuban and duty free sugars for March and April shipment at a further advance of 2 points, or 0.05 cents delivered, which was a new high level for the year and attracted increased offerings. Refiners, however, having apparently covered their more urgent requirements by purchases of the past several days, were inclined to await fresh developments. No additional sales were reported today. Following the recent sharp upturn in raws refined prices were advanced from 10 to 20 points at the opening and all refiners now listing at 4.10 for fine granulated. A large inquiry was reported prior to the upturn, but it was not all accepted by refiners, who were inclined to limit commitments in order to discourage speculation. Brokers report that the orders received ranged from 45 to 60 days' requirements, but that the amount accepted by refiners would amount to no more than 30 days' supplies.

COFFEE—Spot prices held firmly today, with Santos 4s quoted at 9¾ to 10 cents and Rio 7s at 8½ cents. Business, however, was moderate. Roasters were said to be placing fairly large orders for Brazilian coffee in the cost and freight market at prices ranging from 8.30 to 8.50 cents for Santos Bourbon 3s and 5s.

Mining Securities Boom at Toronto

Some Issues Advance $2 as Trading Speeds Up; Unexplained.

Toronto, March 8 (A.P.).—Free from Wall street influence, the Standard Mining Exchange cut loose today and staged a bull market, adding as much as $2 a share to some of the leaders. Golds, silvers and base metals participated in the advance and trading speeded up while prices were advancing. There seemed to be no explanation for the upward movement other than a local buying demand arising from a feeling the market had receded adequately from the top prices established in February. There were also reports in the street of a rise of bullish sentiment in Wall street waiting to get into action with the opening of the New York market.

The heavy traders were Nickel, Noranda, Lake Shore, Mining Corporation, Eldorado, Teck Hughes, Wright Hargreaves, Castle, Siscoe, Howey and Hollinger. Two of these were base metals, three silver and the rest golds. Among the big gold shares Lake Shore moved ahead to $34.25 for a gain of more than $2.50, McIntyre to $23, up $1.50, Dome to $15, up $1.10, Hollinger to $6.90, up .40, Teck Hughes to $4.05, up .25, and Wright Hargreaves to $4.20, up .30. Pioneer at $5.75 was up .50.

Noranda jumped $2 in heavy trading, advancing from $20.75 to $22.75. Nickel was buoyed up by the substantial advance today on the London market and closed at $9.30 for a gain of .40. The gains extended to Coast Copper, Hudson Bay, Sudbury Basin and Falconbridge, the latter chalking up a .15 gain to $2.50.

Power Production Down for Week

Consumption Varies Little; New England Cut 7.1 Per Cent.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Electric Power output fell slightly last week to 1,422,875,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,425,511,000 in the preceding week, which included Washington's Birthday, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. There was a decline of 6.4 per cent from the corresponding week in 1932, while the preceding week was off 5.7 per cent from the like 1932 period.

Power consumption in the central industrial region varied little, being 9.6 per cent below a year ago, compared with a decrease of 9.4 per cent from last year in the previous week. In the Atlantic Seaboard territory the decrease was 5.2 per cent against a decrease of 4.1 per cent the week before.

New England was down 7.1 per cent against 5.5 per cent. The loss on the Pacific Coast was 5.3 per cent compared with 5.4 per cent.

RICHMOND IS LEADER IN SALES BY STORES

Washington Stands Second in Fifth Reserve Area; Baltimore Thrid.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Local retail department store trade was again excelled slightly by that of another city of the Fifth Federal Reserve District in the January, 1933 and 1932 comparison in the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. It reveals that local trade which has led the cities of the district for many months, again receded for the second time in the past three months.

This trade in Washington was 16.7 per cent off from that of the month a year ago. Richmond's trade in the foregoing classification was but 16.5 per cent off. Baltimore's was 19.8 per cent under that of the month last year. Trade of other cities in the district was 19.2 per cent below and that of the district as a whole, 18.1 per cent less.

Local stocks of January 31, 1933, compared with those as of January 31, 1932, were 17.4 per cent less; Richmond stocks, 14.5 per cent less; Baltimore stocks, 14.4 per cent less; those of the other cities in the district, 18 per cent less, and those of the entire district, 16.5 per cent less.

In the comparison of stocks as of January 31, 1933, with those of December 31, 1932, those of Washington presented a decline of 9.9 per cent; those of Richmond, one of 10.1 per cent; those of Baltimore, one of 15.7 per cent; those of other cities of the district, one of 6.5 per cent, and those of the whole district, one of 11.4 per cent.

The stock turnover in Washington for January, 1933, was .259; that of Richmond, .242; Baltimore, .245; other cities of the district, .176; that of the entire district, .242.

The percentage of receivables of January 1, 1933, collected in January, was 34.4 for Washington, 29.5 for Richmond, 23.7 for Baltimore, 26 for other cities of the district and 28.2 for the district as a whole.

New York Central Lines Increase Car Loadings

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Freight loadings of the New York Central System last week increased slightly over the preceding week, which included Washington's birthday. The total was 77,959 cars against 77,317 in the week ended February 25.

MONEY MARKETS

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.
(Associated Press.)

Financial capitals abroad, still omitting quotations on the American dollar, are watching New York and Washington closely for developments in the banking situation.

London—Confidence in the measures already taken in the States sent the stock market up fractionally. It was said in the highest financial quarters that the American situation will have no effect on the British policy with respect to a return to the gold standard.

Paris—Most commentators expect a high rate on the dollar when it is quoted again, reasoning that short sales of approximately 1750,000 may force the rate above last Friday's 25,225 francs.

Elsewhere the American banking situation has dropped for the moment into the background of domestic considerations. American tourists, inconvenienced by the temporary bank holiday, had no difficulty obtaining funds from hotels and travel agencies, though in most instances the price was higher than last week.

Brussels—The dollar was unofficially quoted today at 34 francs, as compared with 33.50 yesterday and between 30 and 31 on Monday.

Berne—The American dollar was unofficially quoted today at 5 francs.

MONTREAL.

Montreal—From the ebb and flow of exchange quotations the Canadian dollar emerged today with added strength and heightened prestige. In comparison with the pound and the French franc the Dominion's currency advanced sharply and maintained a firm position throughout the day. At the close of exchanges the pound was quoted here at $4.13 and the franc 4.72 cents. Yesterday's closing figure for the pound was $4.16 and the franc 4.78 cents.

British and foreign exchange in relation to the Canadian dollar, as compiled by the Royal Bank of Canada, closed today as follows:

Austria (schilling), 3.3174.
Belgium (belga), .1670.
Czechoslovakia (crown), .0354.
Denmark (krone), .1849.
France (franc), .0472.

New York Stocks Trading Confined to Private Deals

Prices Move Up in Montreal, Toronto and London; Turnovers Increase and Trends Are Improved; American Shares Close Higher in England.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Wall street heard today that scattered informal trading in American securities was being done during the period of market suspension here.

There were no suggestions that an organized "bootleg" market existed, but it was pointed out that individuals, who had securities for sale, might arrange transactions between themselves on a "swapping" basis, a method which would involve a minimum of actual cash.

The only light the financial community could get on probable quotations for American stocks and bonds was by studying quotation reports from abroad or from Montreal, but this method was difficult in that it involved translation of those prices into American dollars at a time when trading in dollar exchange had been suspended.

Member firms of organized exchanges have been forbidden to trade while the markets are closed.

Montreal, March 8 (A.P.).—Volume expanded moderately on the stock exchange today as demand increased for base metal stocks and the utilities. Prices moved up firmly, but closed slightly below the best levels of the day. Transfers exceeded 11,000 shares.

A pool in Consolidated Smelters operating in Toronto was reported in the street as the reason for the increased activity in that issue and the extreme buoyancy of the shares. The stock touched a high of 66, 3½ points higher on the day and more than 10 higher on the week. It eased from that figure, however, to close at 64¾, up 2¼. Sales totaled 1,300 shares, a comparatively large turnover for the issue.

Other active stocks were International Nickel, Montreal Power, Shawinigan and Canadian Pacific. Both Nickel and Canadian Pacific closed ¼ higher, the former at 9⅛ and the rail at 11⅛. Montreal Power closed ⅛ higher at 28⅞, while Shawinigan lost all of its gain to close unchanged at 10¾. Brazilian was off ⅛ at 8.

Dominion Textile advanced 3 to 43, while small gains occurred in Dominion Bridge, Cockshutt Plow and Hollinger. Stocks to lose ground included Bank Commerce, down 4 at 126; Bank Montreal, off 1 at 183, a new low; Price Brothers, off 2½; Canadian General Electric preferred, 2½. Fractional recessions were shown by Montreal Power debentures, Massey Harris and both A and B classes of Canadian Industrial Alcohol. Sales totaled 11,155 shares and bonds $5,750.

Toronto, March 8 (A.P.).—The best prices for the day, representing a considerable advance on Tuesday's close, were held in the afternoon trading on the stock exchange, except in a few cases, chiefly among the interlisted shares.

Canadian Pacific and Brazilian Traction each fell back to show a loss of ⅛, and Massey Harris, Imperial Oil and Cockshutt Plow dropped ¼.

International Nickel continued in good demand, Ford was up ⅛, Bell Telephone was ahead nearly 3, and British American Oil held a gain of ⅛.

There was no sign of weakening toward the end of the session and the market closed almost at the top price range for the day. Sales volume also was above the average in recent weeks.

Canadian Pacific became a strong spot in the afternoon and finished at 11⅝ for a net gain of ⅜. International Nickel continued in the lead in volume and closed just where it opened at 9⅛.

In the oil group International Petroleum came to the front with a gain of ⅜ to 11⅛ and gains predominated in the other members of this section. Bell Telephone led the utilities into higher ground, closing at 90, nearly 3 points up. Most of the food stocks traded higher, especially Dominion Stores. Canadian Canners common and Laura scored, but the agriculture implement shares, Massey Harris and Cockshutt Plow, both sold off slightly. Gains were registered for Goodyear Tire and Steel of Canada was also higher.

London, March 8 (A.P.).—Trading on the stock exchange today closed with a confident tone prevailing. A good amount of business was done and there were a number of advances in which the transatlantic shares participated.

Gold mine securities were a feature of the market on the belief that the United States would not abandon the gold standard.

Bar silver advanced to 18 pence per ounce, up ⅛, to the highest point reached since November, the movement being due to speculative buying in anticipation of an increased use of American coinage.

The Bank of England today purchased £42,400 in bar gold. The quotation of bar gold today was 113s 11d, a decline of 3 pence, compared with the price of yesterday.

Leading American shares traded on the stock exchange here closed ¼ to 1¼ dollars higher. Final quotations, showing the net change from the last previous sales, were as follows:

	Closing.	Net chg.
Brazilian Traction	89⅛	*⅜
Canadian Pacific	13⅛	*¼
Drug, Inc.	48	*1
Hydro Electric	6½	*¼

Canadian Dollars Gain in Markets

Montreal Credits Taking Prestige; Pound Is Scaled Down.

Montreal, March 8 (A.P.).—The Canadian dollar gained new prestige in world markets today. A sharp upward swing on European exchanges was coupled with reported demand for Canadian dollar credits to pay for Canadian goods.

The French franc was chosen by financial experts here as a yardstick for comparison because it is a gold currency. Over the week-end the franc was quoted at 4.80 cents in Canadian money. Today quotations were varying between 4.71½ and 4.72.

Further evidence of the improved position of the Dominion's currency was furnished by sterling quotations which at one time today were as low as $4.10, compared with $4.16 yesterday. The pound had not lost its recent advance in the gold comparison, as it would still buy 88 francs, yesterday's closing figure.

Pork Prices Decline.

Chicago, March 8 (A.P.).—The wholesale price of fresh pork broke sharply today simultaneously with the arrival of a liberal supply of live hogs in the stock yards. Prices on prime loins declined 2 to 3 cents a pound, with choice cuts selling at 13 to 16 cents, compared with 16 to 18 yesterday.

Lead Sells at 3 Cents.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—The St. Joseph Lead Co. reports that 800 tons of pig lead was sold yesterday at $2.87½ per 100 pounds, St. Louis, and 2,000 tons at $3 per 100 pounds, New York.

Wall Street Watches Prices Of Raw Materials Advance

Basic raw materials, the real tools of trade, have appreciated in price over the past two or three days. Gains have mostly been small, but sufficiently general to indicate the upward trend. Some quotations, notably those on nonferrous metals, improved today; others held to yesterday's levels, a few slipped back slightly.

The real importance of this movement is still obscure since the period of rise is very brief and a number of emergency factors have influenced the situation. However, there is general agreement that a sustained advance in commodity prices would be an essential preliminary to business recovery and that continuation of current changes, if unaccompanied by excessively inflationary measures, would be most encouraging.

Futures exchanges are closed, so the only available quotations are unofficial "spots," representing goods for immediate delivery. In cotton trade circles it was reported that offerings were being given to mills at 7¾ to 8 cents a pound and that some sales had been made at the latter figure, compared with last Friday's closing spot quotations of 6.35 cents.

Raw sugar, quieter today, held at 3.05 cents a pound against 2.87 cents at the close of business last week. Heavy purchases of sugars from Cuba and from countries on which no duty is paid have been executed here. Manufacturers lifted refined to 4.10 cents a pound wholesale; the recent quotation was generally 3.90.

Lead dealers reported a brisk business and some producers lifted the price to 3¼ cents a pound, an advance of one-quarter cent. Tin was up one-quarter to 25½ cents a pound; zinc firmed one-tenth of a cent to 2.80 cents, East St. Louis; antimony rose one-quarter to 6 cents a pound, and quicksilver jumped $1 to a range of $50 to $53 a flask.

Hog prices reacted moderately at Chicago after yesterday's upturn because, it was said, buyers were unwilling to expend their limited cash, and there was some further profit-taking in the Winnipeg wheat market. Wheat at Liverpool, however, was steady.

Local wholesale dairy markets were virtually unchanged, though some meats, particularly pork, advanced. Dealers, however, did not pass on the rise to the retail customer.

For approximately two years stocks of staples in the warehouses of manufacturers have been held to minimum, almost day-to-day requirements. Large-scale buying, as it was known in palmier days, ceased long since, for there was no inducement to buy ahead in a period of declining prices and sales volume.

Existing supplies of most raw materials, especially the cheaper metals, are so ample that little danger of a shortage exists. Were demand to increase sharply and for a sustained period, however, it is expected that markets might quickly reflect such a change of policy on the part of buyers.

SPOT COTTON PRICES WAITING ON FUTURES

Southern Mills Hesitate to Pay 7¾ to 8 Cents Now Being Asked.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—With reopening of the cotton futures market here contingent upon reestablishment of adequate banking facilities, uncertainties both as to spot cotton values in the South and foreign exchange rates continued today.

Owing to the increased demand for piece goods, a more active inquiry for spot cotton and quotations is being received from the mills, and efforts are being made to arrive at a definite price basis.

In some cases spot houses reported to be offering cotton, basis middling ⅞ landed at Southern mills at prices ranging from about 7¾ to 8 cents per pound.

Mills Hesitate at Prices.

Mills are hesitating to pay these prices, although it is said some small sales have been made at prices ranging up to 8 cents per pound both in the Southwest and the mills in the East, where merchants, as a rule, hesitate to sell at fixed prices in the absence of hedging facilities.

Meanwhile, some spot business has been done with mills on buyers' call at a slight advance in the basis as compared with last Friday, with prices to be fixed after futures markets reopen. Taken altogether, however, spot men here say only a small amount of cotton has changed hands since last Friday.

A tendency to scale down estimates of the probable rate of sterling exchange was noted today and was promoted by a further advance in the Liverpool cotton market, which showed net gains of about 10 to 11 points for the day, with May closing at 4.79 pence compared with 4.68 pence at the close of last Friday, when sterling was quoted at about $3.45.

Sterling at $3.50.

According to a cable received by the New York Cotton Exchange Service today from Liverpool, the British authorities continue to pay sterling to francs at the equivalent of a dollar parity of around $3.50.

The Egyptian futures market in Alexandria was 56 to 58 points higher, while the spot quotations for Indian cotton in Liverpool was 22 points higher at 4.44. The Havre market closed 4 to 5 francs higher.

According to reports reaching cotton men here from Worth street business in cotton goods continued extremely active and it was rumored that some cotton commission house clients, unable to trade in cotton, had diverted their orders to the goods market. Exports today, 9,424 bales, making 5,832,144 so far this season. Port receipts, 2,925 bales. U. S. port stocks, 4,507,801 bales.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Dow, Jones & Co. said today that the unfilled tonnage report of United States Steel Corporation, due Friday, will probably show a decrease, reflecting a slump in new buying coincident with the initial bank holidays in various parts of the country. The decline, it was said, may be "somewhere near the 69,496 tons reported for January."

The number of business failures in the United States last month was 2,732, the smallest for a February since 1930, says Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. The total in February, 1932, was 2,262. Liabilities last month aggregated $65,876,088, a decrease of 22.8 per cent from a year ago.

J. J. Newberry Co. reports February sales volume of $1,978,952, a decrease of 1.2 per cent from the same 1932 month.

Stockholders of American Supply Co. will vote April 5 on a proposal to reduce the par value of the common stock to $25 from $50 a share. This would create a capital surplus of $9,564,775, against which it is proposed to charge plant writedowns and other State valuations.

United States zinc stocks at the end of February amounted to 134,440 short tons, an increase of about 5,000 tons from January 31. Production totaled 20,076 tons, against 19,928 in January.

Harvester Hands Get Small Checks.

Chicago, March 8 (A.P.).—The International Harvester Co. paid its factory workers in checks of $5 and fractions thereof today, to facilitate use of the checks in making purchases. The company said the small denomination checks would be used until banking facilities were normal or some other form of currency was developed.

COMMODITY PRICE INDEX.

(Associated Press.)

Cotton cloths—Several constructions are quoted well above the levels prevailing last Friday. Narrow sheetings are up 1 cent to 4½ cents a pound. Some print cloths and broadcloths have risen ⅛ cent a yard.

Pig Iron—Some business is moving in this district despite the banking suspension. Two or three carloads are said to have been bought since Monday and inquiries are in the market for small amounts.

Textile prices—Owing to uncertainties in the banking and currency situation some mills have withdrawn price lists recently announced to the trade. Such action has been taken by some cotton ribbed underwear manufacturers with respect to their fall 1933 lists, and by a large knitting mill on informal prices previously quoted on sweaters.

Rice—The market is steadier with sentiment reflecting prospects of reduced acreage and a smaller crop. Export demand is said to have picked up slightly in recent weeks.

Copper—Sellers continue unwilling to sell far ahead on the basis of 5 cents a pound, and are doing little business for nearby delivery. Foreign buying, inactive for a long time, fell to still lower levels in the last few days, according to trade interests.

FLOUR MARKET.

Philadelphia, March 8 (A.P.).—Flour and bar unchanged.

Minneapolis, March 8 (A.P.).—Flour prices showed sharp increases today with a majority of millers quoting 30 cents higher for some grades. Bakery flour showed the largest advance, standard and second patents each gaining 50 cents, while family flour was up 15 cents. Standard patents were quoted at 4.35 to 4.40 a barrel and second patents 4.20 to 4.30 a barrel. Family patents were quoted at 4.25 to 4.30 a barrel.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—Flour steady; spring patents, 4.30@4.75; soft winter straights, 3.10@3.25; hard winter straights, 3.90@4.20, nominal.

Speedy Recovery In Steel Is Seen

Review Expects Metal to Reach Bottom Level This Week.

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—American Metal Market, a trade review covering the steel industry, said today that this may prove to be "the low week" in steel production, "with a rapid recovery in the next few weeks to the highest recent rate or slightly more, at between 20 and 25 per cent" of capacity.

"Reaction of buyers and sellers of steel to the developments of the last few days has been a mild one," the review declared. "It is a case of business as usual, subject to a slight restriction, less than might be expected. Buyers have been instructed to suspend shipments of steel in a relatively small proportion of cases. All such requests are being complied with and it is in only rare cases that mills suspend shipments of their own initiative as the credit situation was already well adjusted.

"Throughout the steel trade there is confidence that business in general will undergo marked and healthy improvement in the next few months, but in the larger recovery it is fully expected that steel will lag somewhat behind various other lines of trade. The prospective demand for steel is of such character that steel can not be the leader in the long-term recovery."

FILM STUDIO UNIONS DEBATE WAGE CUTS

$5,200,000 to Be Saved by Voluntary Reduction Actors Accept.

Hollywood, March 8 (A.P.).—Unionized motion picture studio workers opened conferences here tonight on the proposal of producers to reduce the pay of all members of the movie colony except the lowly extras as a means of weathering the current financial storm.

Leaders of the 15,000 unionized workers said their decision would be transmitted tomorrow night to Pat Casey, assistant to Will Hays, film "czar." Producers express the hope the pay cuts will permit the studios to remain in operation?

Although numerous film players announced intention of conferring with managers and attorneys, celebrated actors and actresses began issuing statements late today accepting the salary cut of from 35 to 50 per cent.

No move was made to reduce the pay of the extras, occasional performers in small "bits" and crowd scenes, who receive from $5 to $7.50 per day.

Executives said many stars who are paid by the picture, including Richard Barthelmess, John Barrymore and Leslie Howard, would be asked to take pro rata cuts.

Those due to begin vacations within the next eight weeks—the proposed period of the stringent pay slash—will receive no salaries during their rest periods, or will be expected to endure a half-pay period of work later.

Savings of $5,200,000 from the normal pay roll disbursements would be effected during the eight weeks, including the $800,000 at the Fox Studio, where the 1,900 employes agreed to forego salaries for four weeks.

Iowa Legislators Ban Insurance Assets Run

Des Moines, Iowa, March 8 (A.P.).—Acting with record speed, both houses of the Iowa General Assembly today passed legislation to prevent runs on liquid reserves of insurance companies in Iowa.

The bill empowers the State insurance commissioner to take over the assets of companies operating in Iowa.

First Lady Takes Hurt Trooper for Auto Ride

(Associated Press.)

Leo Casey, an injured New York State trooper, well known to the Roosevelt family at Albany, was taken for a drive yesterday by the First Lady of the Land.

University Park Group To Continue Light Fight

The American University Park Citizens Association voted last night to continue its fight for lights in Brandywine street between Forty-fifth street and Western avenue. Their request was recently turned down on the ground that traffic on the street did not justify the action.

It also was announced at the meeting that the Forty-ninth street sewer would be continued to Albemarle street despite the present banking situation in the District.

Chicago Live Stock Market Is Flooded

Chicago, March 8 (A.P.).—Farmers today assured their city brothers that food would remain cheap as pocket cash of urbanites dwindled.

Counteracting yesterday's booming rise in live stock and fresh meat prices, especially pork, farmers from nearby States laid the specter of a threatened shortage in meat supplies in jig time. Aided by the youngest giant of the transportation industry, trucks, normal supplies of live stock were delivered to the stock yards to the amazement of packers and traders.

More than 10,000 of the 18,000 hogs shipped here were delivered by truck. A Government official at the stock yards said, "They started coming at 6 o'clock last night and they are still coming." Prices of live hogs promptly tumbled 10 to 25 cents a hundred pounds and finally declined 25 to 40 cents, more than wiping out yesterday's advance.

Hail Dictator

Austrian Nazis Are Glad Chancellor Dollfuss "Is Moving Things."

Vienna, March 8 (A.P.).—Alfred Frauenfeld, leader of the Austrian Nazis, said today his party was highly gratified at the assumption of dictatorial powers by Chancellor Dollfuss.

"We are glad to see something started at last," the Nazi chieftain said. "Whatever may be the motive of the Government's action, it is certain to help us—for it means that things finally have begun to move."

Although the Nazi leader said he was pleased, one of the forces that influenced Chancellor Dollfuss to take over dictatorial powers on the invitation of President Miklas was believed to be the rising tide of Nazi sentiment. There have been enthusiastic demonstrations throughout Austria celebrating the Hitler victory in Germany, and Frauenfeld had threatened to seek power by force unless elections were permitted.

The Austrian Parliament has not functioned since its officers resigned Saturday night. They have the sole power to call it into session.

Young Woman Hurt by Auto.

Miss Grace Stehl, 23, of 927 H street northwest, suffered a possible fractured jaw and bruises late yesterday when struck by a car, said to have been driven by Benjamin F. Maniel, 22, of 321 Eleventh street northeast at Third and E streets northwest. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

About the Show Shops

With NELSON B. BELL.

IF any such thing as a bank holiday, or moratorium, ever should occur in this country, making advisable a strict economy in all commodities in everyday use, including space, such grist as might come out of a Wednesday theatrical mill probably would be ground up into a mess of very fine paragraphs, like these:

When "Cavalcade," the Fox Film Corporation's superlatively excellent picturization of the most pretentious and most profoundly serious play Noel Coward has ever written, comes to the National next Monday night, with Clive Brook, Diana Wynyard, John Warburton and others of note in the principal roles, a distinguished first-night audience will be or hand, a considerable invitation list already having been compiled.

Similarly, when "The Big Cage," with Clyde Beatty and his "cats," opens at the Rialto on Saturday Melvin D. Hildreth, the Capital's encyclopedic circus man-attorney, has arranged with Manager Rodney Collier to have as his guests at the 9 p. m. performance a list of some 75 Washingtonians who have been either of or near the big tops professionally at some time in their lives. Included are such notables as Admiral Grayson, Donald Woodward, Gen. Albert E. Truby, Assistant Surgeon General of the United States; Maj. Gen. Harry G. Bishop, Senators Nye, of North Dakota; Neeley, of West Virginia, and Robertson, of Indiana; Mary T. Norton and Robert L. Bacon, of the House; Col. U. S. Grant, 3d, and Dr. Mann.

Eddie Cantor, contrary to original expectation, has been delayed en route and will not arrive in Washington until 8:50 o'clock this evening. He will be met at the station by all of Washington, and officially by the Loew executives and their staffs, headed, of course, by City Manager Carter Barron, and Thomas P. Littlepage, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Ben T. Webster, ditto of the Board of Trade; James E. Colliflower, Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Inspector Lamb, of the Traffic Bureau, and Mark Lansburgh, Kiwanis Club.

Percussion instruments, especially the drums, will be demonstrated by Hans Kindler and the National Symphony at Central High Auditorium, Saturday at 11 a. m., at the final concert in the children's series by the orchestra.

When Italian "Pinocchio" is presented at the National by the Children's Theater Company Saturday, March 18, boys and girls will recognize an old friend in this lovely marionette. In the meantime, they might see "The Piccoli."

The week of March 27 at the National, George M. Cohan will be seen in his latest hit, "Pigeons and People," not inconceivably, but not surely, either, under the auspices of the American Theater Society.

Definitely as an American Theater Society offering, John Golden's production of Rachel Crothers' "When Ladies Meet," will be the National's attraction the week of April 3.

The week of April 17, it is likely that Arch Selwyn will present Lenore Ulric at the National in her new play, and, the week of April 24, Washington will probably be given its second whirl at "Another Language" in the same theater.

I wouldn't guarantee it, but from the present outlook, Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players may launch their ninth season on E street, May 1.

Clark Gable and Lyle Talbot, of the films, on divers and sundry occasions have missed engagements with the Nat Players by the proverbial eyelash.

To accommodate the crowds who will want to see and hear Ben Bernie and "all the lads," a special midnight performance will be given at the Earle tomorrow night, beginning at 11:15 o'clock—even if the doors ARE going to open at 10:15 a. m., and five de luxe shows be given within the regular hours.

The complete line of march for the inaugural parade of the new week will be: RKO-Keith's, opening today, Wheeler & Woolsey in "So This Is Africa;" Loew's Fox, Wynne Gibson in "The Crime of the Century," and Eddie Cantor in person; Earle, Carole Lombard and Jack Oakie in "From Hell to Heaven," and Ben Bernie and his orchestra; Palace, John Gilbert and Mae Clarke in "Fast Workers;" Rialto, opening Saturday, Clyde Beatty and Anita Page in "The Big Cage;" Metropolitan, surprise picture, opening Saturday, to be announced tomorrow; Columbia, opening Monday, Zita Johann and George Brent in "Luxury Liner."

Likewise, you probably know by now what is meant by a con scrip!

Annapolis, Md., March 8 (A.P.).—A resolution asking Congress to issue additional currency "or circulating medium" and to provide this currency to state and national banks of Maryland at the same time was passed by the Maryland General Assembly late tonight.

Presented a draft of the resolution late in the day by Maj. E. Brooke Lee, adviser of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie following conferences with Government officials in Washington, the Legislature held a night session in order to approve the petition to Congress.

Action in each House was unanimous.

PUBLISHER IS LIKELY TO GET LONDON POST

(Associated Press.)

An ambassadorial corps to represent the Roosevelt administration in the world's great capitals is taking definite shape, although somewhat slowly because of the preoccupation of the new President with financial affairs at home.

The appointment of Robert W. Bingham, Louisville, Ky., lawyer and newspaper publisher, as ambassador to Great Britain is likely to be announced soon. Others mentioned for major appointments are:

Claude G. Bowers, of New York, editor and prominent Democrat counsellor; Ira Nelson Morris, of Chicago, diplomat, author and world traveler; Jesse Isidor Straus, New York merchant.

Bowers, 54-year-old native of Indiana, is reported slated to succeed Irwin B. Laughlin as ambassador to Spain. In the 1928 Democratic National convention at Houston, Bowers was the keynote orator.

Norris, Minister to Sweden under Wilson and Harding, has been mentioned in connection with the Berlin post, held by Frederic N. Sackett. He is 58 years old.

Straus, 60-year-old head of a big New York department store, may replace Harry F. Guggenheim at Havana, although he has been reported under consideration also for a European post.

Because of the importance of the London position, Bingham's name as successor to Andrew W. Mellon probably will be sent to the Senate before long.

Realizing the delicacy of the situation in the Far East, the administration may decide to make no changes in the envoys to Japan and China, Joseph C. Grew at Tokyo, and Nelton T. Johnson at Peiping. It is expected also to avail itself of the experience of Hugh R. Wilson, minister to Switzerland, and Hugh S. Gibson, ambassador to Belgium.

Green Blames Industry For Economic Trouble

New York, March 8 (A.P.).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the New York Board of Trade, Inc., asserted today that industry itself is responsible for the Nation's economic predicament and that industrial management must lead the way out.

Industry, said Mr. Green, who announced yesterday in Washington that labor would demand higher wages if prices go up as a result of the present banking situation, "launched a destructive attack upon their own consuming market through the enforcement of lower wages and reduced buying power."

Mrs. McClure Charges Cruelty; Asks Divorce

San Francisco, March 8 (A.P.).—Suit for divorce was filed here today by Mrs. Stella McClure against Lieut. Col. Charles W. McClure, U. S. A., retired, whom she married in Washington, D. C., March 26, 1924.

The complaint charged cruelty and asked for "suitable alimony." There are no children.

Arkansas Senators Back Quick Divorce

Little Rock, Ark., March 8 (A.P.).—The Arkansas Senate tonight defeated, 25 to 6, a House bill to repeal the State's 90-day divorce law.

Defeat of the bill leaves in force the law enacted two years ago which provides that divorce suits may be filed by any one after 60 days residence in Arkansas and decrees granted 30 days later.

ROOSEVELTS VISIT HOLMES WHO IS 92

(Associated Press.)

A 40-minute visit from President and Mrs. Roosevelt was the ninety-second birthday present received yesterday by former Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The visit started at early dusk, and didn't end until the moon was shining in the sky. But a patient crowd that kept getting larger and larger, waited for President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt to emerge from the staid, old, red-brick town house with the iron grill balustrade at 1720 I street northwest, were at last rewarded.

They not only had a chance to cheer Mr. Roosevelt and his son, James, as they drove off in their car, but they also glimpsed a tall, athletic figure in brown and red flash past on foot—Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, the President's wife, walking back to the White House.

Silent on Visit.

She stood still and waited until the President and his son had entered the open car, then quickly started down the street.

She said she didn't think she should tell what occurred in that 40-minute period when a President called "liberal" was talking with the venerable former justice, famed for his liberal opinions.

In his entire career on the bench, Justice Holmes himself never gave interviews to newspapers, and the President and his wife apparently felt they should respect his wishes.

"You know what we want," she said, "to congratulate him, of course, upon his birthday."

The President, in going to call on one of the Capital's most beloved and most outstanding personalities, followed a well-beaten path. All day long, the powerful who had been his associates in a long public life, and the man of the streets who looked to him for a rare brand of justice, had been going up the short flight of steps to his door.

Charles Henry Butler, once an officer of the Supreme Court, came carrying a single, long-stemmed rose—the sort of a gift that would be gratefully received by a man like Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Louis Howe Is Promoted To Admiral of Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., March 8 (A.P.).—Two of President Roosevelt's official family were included in a list of 246 colonels, 17 admirals, one rear admiral, one colonel of Kentucky Air Forces, one commander and one captain announced today by acting Gov. A. B. Chandler.

To Louis Howe, the President's confidential secretary, already a Kentucky colonel, went the title of admiral. Postmaster General James A. Farley was made a colonel. The commissions issued by the lieutenant governor prior to relinquishing authority to Gov. Ruby Laffoon on the latter's return from Washington also included James Truman Bingham, a midshipman at Annapolis as an admiral.

Colorado Shifting Peak Starts New Landslide

Durango, Colo., March 8 (A.P.).—With a roar that could be heard for miles, Carbon Mountain, Colorado's shifting peak, awakened to renewed activity during the night.

Measurements revealed nearly 35,000,000 tons of rock and earth are moving down the mountainside at the rate of 19 inches an hour.

Alexandria Water Suit in Court Today

Arguments will be made today before the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, in Richmond, in the suit of the Alexandria Water Co. against the City of Alexandria. City Attorney Carl Budwesky and Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan will represent the city, and the water company will be represented by Gardner L. Boothe and Charles H. Dickey.

The suit is an appeal of the water company from a decision by the State Corporation Commission, in which the company was awarded an increase of 10 per cent in rates, when an increase of approximately 40 per cent had been asked.

The Alexandria City Council has fought the proposed increase on the ground present rates are already high in comparison with other cities of Alexandria's size.

MONTGOMERY CUTS PAY ON RELIEF JOBS

Decreased Fund Is Cause of Action on Emergency Projects.

9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.
Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Decrease in the pay of workers on created jobs of the unemployment relief committee of Montgomery County was announced yesterday as an economy measure. The committee previously had paid a maximum of $2 a day in the suburban sections and $1 in rural sections. This was reduced to $1.50 in suburban areas. The rural rate stood.

Wages will be set so as to be nearly the same as those paid other workers by employers of the community under the new plan. Dwindling relief funds were given as the reason for the change.

George W. Davis, member of the board of education and chairman of the unemployment relief committee, was selected to head the annual Social Service League campaign for funds with which to carry on relief funds. The finance committee will map out plans for the campaign while the committee headed by Mr. Datvis will have charge of the drive for funds which will be held in May.

Members of the finance committee are: Walter B. Armstrong, chairman; Robert E. Bondy, George W. Davis, Frederic P. Lee, John Dickinson and Dr. J. W. Bird, president of the league. The committee will meet within the next week to plan for the drive.

Izaak Walton League Elects.

Francis Kirk has been elected president of the Sandy Spring Chapter of the Izaak Walton League. Other officers are Marsden Waddell, of Glenwood, Howard County, vice president; Edward Snowden, Sandy Spring, second vice president, and John Bancroft, secretary.

ARLINGTON CITIZENS BACK GAS CUT FIGHT

Federation Also Suggests $100,000 Slash From School Budget.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Putting its entire support around the Arlington County Public Utility Commission in its fight against the Rosslyn Gas Co. for a rate reduction, which comes before the State corporation commission at Richmond March 23, the Arlington County Civic Federation last night unanimously adopted the resolution as offered by the public utility committee of the federation, of which L. C. McNemar is chairman. It follows:

"That it is the consensus of the federation that the people of Arlington County are obviously entitled to purchase gas from the Washington Gas Light Co. through its subsidiary, the Rosslyn Gas Co., or otherwise, at the same rate as the people of the District of Columbia are now or may hereafter be permitted by proper authority to purchase gas from the Washington Gas Light Co."

The resolution further asks that the commission avail itself of every legal means to secure such an order from the State corporation commission.

Adopting the comprehensive report of the committee on economy and tax reform, Arthur Orr, chairman, the federation adopted these recommendations:

First—That the $100,000 included in the school budget to take care of certain debts be eliminated.

Second—That the county board be requested to direct the county manager to make a study of the duties of the various positions and offices of the county government and the qualifications required by the incumbent of each, and that the salaries paid be compared with salaries paid for similar positions elsewhere.

Third—That the committee request the clerk of the court to inform it of the amount of fees received by him or his predecessor during the calendar year 1932, and whether or not he is required to account for these fees under section 3516 of the Virginia code.

Arlington Kiwanis Club Pledges Bank Crisis Aid

Pinckney J. Harman, chairman of the Capital District Kiwanis committee on vocational guidance and president of the Strayer's Business College, was the speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Arlington County yesterday at Windsor Arms. Mr. Pinckney went into detail on the principles of vocational guidance and how the local club could be of service to boys and girls.

The club unanimously adopted a resolution terming the bank holiday decree of President Roosevelt an act of courage, and pledging to "continue our faith and support in the policies and program of the Government with regard to this financial problem and request our fellow citizens to do likewise."

St. Stephen, Clovers Triumph in A. A. U. Court Tourney.

SENSATIONAL basket ball marked last night's play in the District A. A. U. championship tournament being sponsored by The Post at the Tech High gymnasium. Two of the four games scheduled were decided in the final minute of action after point-for-point battles and one game was considered a decided upset.

The Miller Furniture Co. team provided the surprise when it eliminated the Boys Club Big Five in a brilliant battle, 43-41, while War Department A. G. O. took the other thriller by 38-35 from Triple Tau. The other contests resulted in a 41-27 victory for the Clovers over the Mount Vernon five and a 32-18 win for the St. Stephen's quintet over the Penn Tires tossers.

Sherman and Harris Steal Show.

Joe Sherman and Mickey Harris stole the show in the Miller's victory. The former sank 5 field goals for 10 points, while the latter accounted for 21 points. Harris had 5 field goals and 11 of 12 fouls and it was two of these free throws which decided the issue.

After a nip-and-tuck beginning, Miller Furniture worked its way to a 20-15 lead at the half. In the second half, the Boys Club came back and tied the score. The lead went first one way and then the other. With a minute to go the count was deadlocked at 41-41. It was at this point that Harris stepped up to sink two free throws and take the game. Cole and Money were the stars for the Boys Club.

The Clovers provided some surprise by the manner in which they won over Mount Vernon. The church five had Forrest Burgess, the G. W. star, in their line-up, but, despite the 14 points registered by him, the Clovers were never in serious danger. They offered Kane and Dougherty as their heroes and this pair dropped in enough points between them to almost take the verdict. The Clovers held an 11-to-7 advantage at the half.

Triple Tau Tossers Show Fight.

The War Department A. G. O. team had to fight the battle of its life to escape elimination. With the score tied and a minute to go, War Department came through, with enough points to take a 38-35 decision from the Triple Tau five.

The A. G. O. tossers were served notice at the start that Triple Tau was going to make a battle of it. The two teams matched points as the first half progressed and at the intermission the score was tied at 19-all.

In the second half the action reached the do-or-die stage and Triple Tau surprised by having A. G. O. deadlocked at 35 points. In the final minute Beech came through with a field goal and Bitonti made a foul to clinch the game.

St. Stephen's ran up a 19-5 margin on the Penn Tires boys and then coasted to victory. The game was in the 130-pound class.

While passing around cigars, Johnny announced proudly that the lad would be named John Joseph, jr., and that mother, son and himself were getting along just fine.

MANGIN NO. 1 IN INDOOR TOURNEY

Sutter Seeded No. 2 in National Play; 64 to Compete.

NEW YORK, March 8 (A.P.).—Gregory Mangin, of Newark, former Georgetown University star, defending champion, though he stands but seventh in the national ranking list, headed the seeded group today in pairings for the National Indoor Tennis Championships starting March 11 at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Six of the first ten American stars, including Ellsworth Vines, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, who battled France unsuccessfully last fall in the Davis Cup final, failed to enter the battle of the boards.

Sutter No. 2 in Field of 64.

The field was held to 64, with Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, former Tulane star, seeded No. 2; Frank Shields, of New York, No. 3; Sidney B. Wood, of New York, No. 4; George Lott, of Chicago, No. 5; Berkeley Bell, of New York, No. 6; J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., No. 7, and Dr. Eugene McCauliff, of Yonkers, N. Y., No. 8.

In the upper bracket with Mangin were placed Wood, Hall and McCauliff, with the lower half, by far the tougher of the two, drawing Shields, Lott and Bell along with Sutter.

Mangin Draws Melton As First Foe.

Mangin was paired with Frank N. J. Welton, of New York, in his opening match. Wood drew the New York veteran, Edward W. Burns, as his first opponent and pairings for other seeded players were: Hall vs. Clark Andrews, of Yale; McCauliff vs. George Key, of Harvard; Sutter vs. Dr. William Rosenbaum, of New York; Shields vs. Allan W. Swayze, of New York; Bell vs. Bryan Hamlin, of Easthampton, N. Y., and Lott, runner-up last year, vs. Harold MacGuffin, of Philadelphia.

Two entries were listed from abroad, J. H. Sillman noting his affiliation as the Queens Club, London, while Dr. Irving Epstein, living in New York, registered his club as the Vichy Sporting Club, Paris. Neither is known to New York tennis, nor ranked abroad.

The tournament, opening Saturday, will continue through seven days of play with the finals scheduled for March 18.

MAT'S ELITE IN ACTION TONIGHT

Londos-Judson Bout Features Program at Auditorium.

TWO world championship claimants, an 'uncrowned champion' and a fancy collection of top fighters tonight will unite in offering Washingtonians probably the most pretentious wrestling line-up ever featured at the Washington Auditorium.

Topping the show will be the ace drawing card, Jim Londos, who risks his title claim in a finish go with an outstanding contender, Frank Judson.

Capacity Crowd Expected.

That Londos will play to near capacity despite the current bank holiday was obvious last night. A complete sell-out of ringside and box seats was reported at Joe Turner's Annapolis Hotel office, although it simultaneously was announced that good seats a plenty still are available.

Judson's upset of Fred Grobmier last week surprised the local mat populace. Showing to splendid advantage against Champion Jim in a previous meeting, Judson's admirers here insist he will give an ever finer account of himself tonight.

Since defeating Rudy Dusek via decision earlier in the winter, Judson not only has repeated over "Rude" Rudy but has wrestled to draws with Abe Coleman and Ray Steele and won over Gino Garibaldi, Jim Clinstock and Grobmier.

Londos, who paired off with Joe Stecher before 19,000 paid admissions last week, remains the standout crowd pleaser of grappledom, having attracted several capacity houses of late.

Pesek, one of Londos' most persistent challengers, concedes much weight and general size to Clinstock. Pesek's aggressiveness and science, however, should enable him to show to the best possible advantage.

In 30-minute bouts Hans Steinke steps with John Maxos, Able Coleman works with Rudy Dusek and Paul Jones engages Ernie Dusek.

MONTE MUNN IS HEART VICTIM

Football and Boxing Star of Famed Family Dies at 32.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 8 (A.P.).—Monte Munn, a member of the athletically famous family of that name in Nebraska, died here today of heart disease. He had been ill a few days. He was 32 years old.

In keeping with his other brothers, Munn was a star in football, track and baseball while a student at the University of Nebraska. He was graduated in 1922.

Later, Munn in turn was a professional boxer, a member of the legislature of his native State, a lawyer and a business man. He came here in 1930 to engage in the coal business.

As a professional boxer, Munn met some of the best heavyweights of his day. He defeated Tiny Jim Herman, Harold Maye and Victorio Campolo, but was outpointed in ten rounds by Johnny Risko and technically knocked out by Roberto Roberti. He quit boxing in 1928.

Wayne Munn, a brother and noted professional wrestler following sensational career as an athletic at the University of Nebraska; died several years ago.

Corbett Still Unsigned For McLarnin Match

It was understood that Jack Kearns, manager of Jackie Fields, recently deposed by Corbett, is insisting on a fight between Fields and McLarnin, with the winner meeting Corbett.

White said his promise to have Corbett meet Fields in a return bout is limited to six months after the San Francisco fight, after which the champion will be free to face any opponent he chooses.

Babe Ruth Takes His First Workout

Refuses to Mount Scales; Contract Not Returned; Couldn't Sign.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 8 (U.P.).—The Yankees never returned his contract so he really has none to sign if he cared to, Babe Ruth proclaimed today, as he took his first workout of the spring training season.

He refused to get on the scale after the workout, probably, in the opinion of some, because he is somewhat overweight.

Lou Gehrig and Charlie Ruffing, the remaining of the Yankee holdout trio, still were absent today.

The remainder of the squad was present for today's session as Tony Lazzeri, Frank Crosetti, "Dusty" Cooke, Mel Hoag and Herb Pennock brought the total to 30.

Oregon Racing Bill In Governor's Office

Salem, Oreg., March 8 (U.P.).—The Oregon Senate late today passed the pari-mutuel dog and horse racing bill and sent it to the governor. The bill will legalize racing and pari-mutuel betting on dogs and horses, establish a commission and levy a tax for State purposes.

JIM MOONEY IS SEEN AS CARD STAR

Pitcher's Comeback Predicted; Dodgers Prep for A's.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 8 (A.P.)—James I. Mooney, the Tennessee schoolmaster, whose brilliant 1931 pitching record was dulled by a tailspin while with the Giants last year, may come back and star with the Cardinals, Manager Gabby Street announced today at the second workout here.

Street said he was puzzled at Mooney's failure last year until he found that Mooney was a high-ball pitcher in 1931 and the Giants tried to make a low-ball pitcher out of him. "You can't do that," said the old sergeant.

Dodger Yannigans Win From Regulars.

Miami, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—With the Athletics due here Saturday to start the spring exhibition games, Max Carey's Brooklyn Dodgers went through a stiff drill today and wound up with a 4-inning ball game, the first of the season.

The Yannigans, with Babe Phelps and Thornton Schwenk, a southpaw rookie, hurling, beat the Regulars, 5 to 3. Ray Lucas, up from Jersey City, and Freddy Heimach pitched for the Regulars. Carey was impressed by Bob Reis, recruit third-sacker, who may be used regularly if Joe Stripp, regular third-sacker, doesn't sign. Hack Wilson also remains a holdout.

Hogan's Hitting Features Braves' Drill.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—Paced by Frank "Shanty" Hogan, monstrous catcher, the Boston Braves today gave Manager Bill McKechnie a display of long-range hitting. Hogan whaled two balls out of the park. Bob Worthington reported for duty today and denied he was holding out for more salary. Rabbit Maranville and Bill Urbanski were still missing.

Hurst Continues as Phil Holdout.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—Don Hurst, unsigned first baseman of the Phillies, announced today he probably would remain a holdout on Friday, the day he is due in the spring training camp. He said he favored Sunday for a conference with club officials.

Previously Hurst announced he would await legislative action in Pennsylvania on the blue law bill before making any salary demands, since passage of the measure, allowing Sunday baseball, would increase the Phillies' revenue this season.

Hafey Pounds Ball Hard For Reds.

Tampa, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—Chick Hafey took his first workout this season with the Cincinnati Reds today and celebrated his recovery from last year's illness, by hitting long drives off Eppa Rixey, Larry Benton and Bennie Fry.

Ailing Hurlers Return To Giants.

Los Angeles, March 8 (A.P.).—Two ailing pitchers returned to mound duty today as Manager Bill Terry sent the New York Giants through another tough practice session in preparation for a renewal of combat with the Chicago Cubs at Wrigley Field Friday.

Adolfo Luque, veteran relief hurler, and Ray Starr, obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals, put on uniforms again after a temporary absence. Luque was suffering from a slight cold and sore throat. Starr injured one leg earlier in the week.

An eight-inning practice game was held this afternoon.

Rookies Star as Pirate Regulars Win.

Paso Robles, Calif., March 8 (A.P.).—The Pittsburgh Pirate Regulars won their third straight game from the Yannigans, 2 to 1, at the spring training camp here today.

Bill Stoner and Homer Hurst, a pair of rookies, pitched good ball for the Regulars. Two errors coupled with a pair of hits gave the Regulars their runs off Charlie Wood, Yannigan hurler.

Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, Calif., March 8 (A.P.).—Lon Warnecke, Guy Bush and Roy Henshaw were named today as the pitchers for the Chicago Cubs' third exhibition game with the New York Giants at Los Angeles Friday.

The announcement came from Manager Charley Grimm after the regulars had won a 5-to-4 practice game from the Yannigans. Harvey Hendrick hit a home run off Bush in the first inning, with the traffic on the bases stagnated, to account for four runs, and Woody English singled in the seventh to score on Kiki Cuyler's triple.

Tiger Rookie Is Seen as Regular

Pete Fox, Beaumont Recruit, Stars in Batting Drill.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 8 (A.P.).—Ervin (Pete) Fox, Beaumont outfielder, made an auspicious debut today with the Tigers and lived up to advance notices. He did some satisfying work at bat, and may be slated to play the Tiger sun field this season, according to camp rumor.

Today two squads worked out, each fully equipped with battery men, infield and outfield material. The first squad begins work at 10 o'clock continuing to 12:30, and the second outfit takes up the work as the first leaves.

Tribe "Frosh" Hurlers Face Pelicans.

New Orleans, March 8 (A.P.).—Manager Roger Peckinpaugh watched the Cleveland Indians pitching staff snap through a long workout today and intimated he may send a pair of "freshmen" hurlers against the New Orleans Pelicans in Saturday's and Sunday's exhibition games.

Pitcher Mel Harder appeared for a short warming-up session and said he had gained 5 pounds since joining the camp in spite of a cold and a throat infection.

Friberg Delights New Red Sox Owners.

Sarasota, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—Bernie Friberg, the Lynn, Mass., veteran, who has spent thirteen seasons in the National League, today introduced himself to the new owners of the Boston Red Sox by banging one of Henry Johnson's offerings over the left field fence, a distance of 400 feet as the crow flies.

Old inhabitants agreed the drive set a new Sarasota record.

A's Use Big Stick on Yannigans.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—The Philadelphia Athletics "regulars" today again applied the big stick to the club "yannigans" in a training-camp game, and batted out a 17-to-5 victory.

Simmons Star in Chisox Drill.

Pasadena, Calif., March 8 (A.P.).—White Sox worries over Al Simmons' health vanished today as the big outfielder drove ball after ball over the fence in batting practice.

"If he's sick, show me to a good hospital at once so I can get some more like him," Manager Lew Fonseca shouted.

Manager Fonseca intimated he may use Red Kress in right field this season. In the first inter-club game line-up, he sent him to that position in place of Evar Swanson.

Bettencourt, Grid Star, Gets License to Wed

Reno, Nev., March 8 (A.P.).—Lawrence J. ("Larry") Bettencourt, former football star at St. Mary's College and now a professional baseball player, obtained a license here today to wed Miss Anne Pagni, of Oakland.

New Hampshire House O.K.'s Pari-Mutuel Bill

Concord, N. H., March 8 (A.P.).—The House of Representatives today passed the pari-mutuel race track bill by a vote of 273 to 109.

The measure, which would permit operation of pari-mutuel betting machines was immediately sent to the Senate, which has frequently been reported in favor of the measure.

The bill would permit operation of the pari-mutuel machines in any community of the State after such action is voted by citizens of the town or city involved, and permit operation of the machines only during this and next year.

Pegler

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

IT was my misfortune not to be among those present at the dedication of the new wrestling champion of the world, or New York, or somewhere, one Jim Browning, from some little town in Missouri, who lay on his back in the Garden ring on a recent evening, wrapped his legs around Strangler Lewis, twizzled him around in midair for some time, banged his head on the floor as you might wallop a catfish against the side of a boat, to subdue his wiggles, and then ironed him out, amid cheers.

Mr. Browning, it seems, is a sterling sportsman who intends to be a true champion, jealous of the fine traditions which all true sport lovers will ever hold dear.

Beautiful Influence Enters Mat Game.

This causes me to feel that a very beautiful influence has come into the sport, and if times were less difficult there certainly would be a gala testimonial banquet at one of the big hotels one of these evenings with William Muldoon conspicuous on the dais to glower around the room at the assembled poltroons and evil influences and thunder the terrible word "scoundrel" as only he can pronounce it.

As every one knows, Mr. Muldoon has been a great force for good in the sports of the ring during the last twelve years or so. True, there have been an extraordinary number of fakes and fouls during his administration, and the kidnapers, house breakers, bootleggers, and smugglers who infest the sport have been quite as active as they ever were before. But with Mr. Muldoon on the prize-fight commission, there has been a comforting assurance all the time that if the boys ever should go too far Mr. Muldoon would take firm steps with them. They did go pretty far, but not too far. I wonder how far too far is. I also wonder how high is up.

Sure to Live Up to Standards Of Sport.

This is not to suggest, of course, that the new champion wrestler, Jim Browning, would ever permit himself to become involved in any proceedings of a kind which would be likely to tear down the fine standard of sportsmanship for which the wrestling business is noted. He says he would not do such and the word of a new champion is good enough for me.

It will be a sweet change, this reign of ethics and high principles and conscientious competition in wrestling.

I have felt—I have sometimes felt almost positive about it—that some of the heavyweight championship matches discoursed for the customers in various rings around the United States were not being conducted on the highest plane. It is hard to prove one's suspicions, because who can sit at a ringside and purport to read what is going on in the heart and soul of a great moist, hairy, blubbery mass of meat, momentarily invested with the highest honors in the game? One may and one does have suspicions arising from certain circumstances, but what fair judge would accuse a noble athlete of doing wrong; merely on circumstantial evidence?

Wrestlers Are Human, Curley Asserts.

Remember, if you please, that however impersonally you may regard the party under the suspicion, somebody loves him and cherishes his baby shoes. It is hard to bear in mind as one looks at them involved in their tangles and gigantic sprawls upon the mat that wrestlers are human beings with the hopes, principles, fears, desires, and so forth of human beings, but Jack Curley has told me repeatedly that they are and Mr. Curley is in a position to know. Mr. Curley has kept wrestlers in his home. He has slept with them and sat at a table with them and he maintains that they domesticate very readily.

One incident comes to my mind which seemed to suggest that maybe sometimes the wrestlers wrestled according to instructions or some prearranged scenario. This was a bout in Los Angeles. A sophisticated sports writer took his shiny new bride to the wrestling bouts one evening and was terribly embarrassed when his helpmeet, sitting in the first row, maintained a running fire of squalls and screams throughout the main event and rooted for the wrong wrestler. Our friend was chagrined to think that here he was, supposed to be a very smart man, an authority, if you please, who knew exactly what was going on at all times, and here was his bride acting in a very dumb manner. He remonstrated gently when the bouts had ended, pointing out that she had made a mugg, as he said, of him in the presence of several thousand people.

Look Ignorant Rooting for Wrong Man.

Harvard Beats Yale; Claims Hockey Title

Boston, March 8 (A.P.).—The Harvard hockey team tonight filed a strong claim on the American intercollegiate title by outbattling Yale for a 4-3 overtime victory in the third and deciding game of the thirty-third annual ice series at the Boston Garden.

Yale won the opening game, 4 to 1, at New Haven and the Crimson evened the series here last Saturday by the same margin. It was the third three-game series in five years. Harvard, during the season, was outclassed only by McGill and Toronto, crack Canadian teams.

Mobile Lacks Money for Contest

Goslin's Long Pokes Off Lines Feature Batting Drill.

By BOB CONSIDINE
(Post Staff Correspondent).

BILOXI, Miss., March 8.—The financial boogy man threatened to remove the first game of the training season from the schedule today when the gentlemen in Mobile who are in charge of the scheduled game there Saturday between Washington and Atlanta communicated with Clark Griffith and stated that since Mobile was dealing only in front collar buttons as a medium of currency there wasn't much sense in coming over.

Action on whether or not the game will be played will be held up until tomorrow, but the feeling around here is that it does not make much difference whether the game is played or not: (1) Because it will cost the club about $100 to make the short trip over into Alabama, and (2) the newly arrived players are not especially keen on beginning active play within four days of arriving at this garden spot of the shrimp salad coast.

Biloxi's Bank Roll Mostly in Nickels.

If the game does fall through Manager Cronin probably will order one of the ever-enjoyable Yannigan-Regulars games for the Biloxi ball yard Saturday. Anyway, Atlanta was supposed to come over here Sunday, and probably will. For there's still plenty of money around these parts, mostly in nickels.

The shrimp factories pay the hired hands a nickel every time they pick the peninsulas off 100 of the species and then there also is the flood of jits from the many slot machines in town, some of them achieved by coaxing the three little ferris wheels inside the machine to stop on a row of plums or two bunches of cherries and a lemon, and some of them achieved by the more forthright method of hitting the front of the machine with an ax and removing the contents therefrom as was the case with the wealthy old quarter machine in the hotel's basement.

Goslin in Form In Batting Drill.

This morning, at the ball park, the boys held the first of their really general workouts, composed of pitching, hitting, infield and outfield play and a bit of base running. The sluggers, who took their raps at the plate, showed at least 100 per cent improvement in the sharpness of their hitting eyes, Goose Goslin being in rare form. The Goose whacked some of the longest balls ever hit in this vast park, being able to sock even the offerings of Paul Lines, the wild underhand rookie pitcher, who has all the regulars plate shy.

The batters had plenty of fast balls to hit, with young Bob Friederichs and Ed Linke in the box. Both of these young men will have plenty of chances to show their ability to "take it" in the training games. Of the two, the bespectacled Friederichs has more native ability, and better all-around pitching game, but Linke has the strength and speed to bust them by the batter in the pinches with Johnsonian fervor.

Rookies Hold Forth In Infield.

Ossie Bluege, who isn't very worried about the attempts of a couple of rookies after the job he has held down for a decade or more, and Buddy Myer, called by Joe Cronin at last night's banquet "the best second baseman in the league," were excused early today and sat around watching an infield composed of Joe Kuhel, Johnny Kerr, Bob Boken, on short, and Cecil Travis, on third, throw the ball around, with Manager Cronin occasionally taking the places of either Boken or Travis. It was Boken's first real showing here, and he displayed a sure-handed gangling sort of shortstopping that looked exceptionally good. He has a splendid arm. Off handed, he looks like he'll field 30 points higher in a season than Travis, but his batting shows no signs of improving.

The new National outfield, Manush, Schulte and Goslin, were chased all over the lot by the eccentric fungoes of Altrock and Schacht.

The big boys gamboled hither and thither pulling down everything sent out there, and while none of them let their arms go regularly, now and then they'd fire one in that would cause the fungo boys to scatter for safety.

EBONY LADY, AT ODDS-ON, WINS CERMAK MEMORIAL PURSE

Perfect Ride Given Choice By Coucci

Gilbert Scores With Von Sion to Take Riding Lead.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., March 8 (A.P.). — A half dozen Florida Derby candidates clashed here today in the one mile of the Anton J. Cermak Memorial, named in honor of the late Chicago mayor, who was a constant visitor to the local track on the afternoons prior to his death. Favorite players picked the right one in Mrs. Jack Howard's lightly-weighted filly, Ebony Lady, which sped home a length clear of the Brookmeade Stable's Inlander to pay $3.50. Third money went to Mrs. A. J. Contento's Golden Fate, which was an additional length behind.

Inlander might have won with better racing luck. He broke tardily, made up a lot of ground, and was poorly handled through the stretch. Ebony Lady received a perfect ride, completing the mile in 1:37 1-5 over a track that had dried out to fast condition for this event.

Golden Fate Leads to Stretch.

Golden Fate showed a keen brand of early speed, showing the way to the head of the stretch, while Coucci kept Ebony Lady close on the trail under restraint. When asked to run, the favorite dashed to the front and had enough left to withstand Inlander's belated bid.

St. Christopher gave Mrs. J. H. Whitney her first success the meeting when he won the opening event by three lengths to return $8.90. Shoo took the place from Loyal Loule by two lengths. The winner was sent right to the front by Hank Mills and maintained his advantage all the way. Daily News, the favorite, raced with dull speed until the stretch where his move came too late. Plutarch ran in a similar fashion.

Interruption, a chestnut daughter of John P. Grier, showed her heels to ten other 2-year-old fillies in the second race, registering by a length and a half over Betty Wee. The latter was a length before Easy Come, which pulled up decidedly lame for the place. Interruption was first in motion and opened up a daylight lead while Betty Wee broke slowly and had to make up considerable ground to finish second. The winner paid $10.70.

Zorona Easily Scores In Third.

Zorana, paying $6.20, accounted for the purse in the third contest, leading Wayward Lad across the pay-off line by two good lengths. Primer lost the place by the narrowest possible margin. Dabson rated Zorana close to the pace cut out by Primer to the stretch. The favorite appeared to be in tight quarters, but she got through an opening on the inside turning for home and drew away under pressure. Wayward Lad finished with a rush to grab the place in the last nod.

The fourth race decided over 1 1-16 miles on the turf afforded no little excitement for the crowd. Plum Wild registered by five lengths at the juicy odds of $58.20 for $2 with Electric Gaff nosing Just Remember out for the place. Going to the first turn Miss Axenstein in last place ran into the hedge on the inside and turned several somersaults, Jockey F. Case also performing a spectacular flying dive. However, horse and rider arose uninjured and the spectators cheered. Plum Wild and Electric Gaff raced head and head to the final turn where the long shot drew far clear. Just Remember closed steadily and was catching Electric Gaff with every stride.

Johnny Gilbert, America's ace rider for 1932 forged ahead of "Duke" Bellizzi for the current meeting when he brough Von Sion, a New Orleans invader, home on top in the sixth race. This gave the Kansas lad 32 winners, one more than his closest rival. Von Sion beat Singing Heart by two lengths to return $19.30 after leading all the way. Idle Stefan was third, beaten another two lengths, but would have been a much stouter contender but for being pocketed on the inside nearly the entire trip.

McGonigle a notorius bad actor at the post got the best of the start in the last race and scored by two lengths to pay $8.70. Chatty beat Rowdy Boy by three parts of a length for the place. Kneehigh, the favorite, never was a contender.

Former Big Leaguer Addresses G. W. Baseball Candidates

Young Van-Irving Fight Tuesday Held "Natural"

District Intersectional Rivalry to Be Stirred Up as Maulers Clash in Portner's Feature of Promising Card.

YOUNG Van and Henry Irving met last night. The two Washington middleweights who clash in their fistic "natural" which features the program at Portner's Arena next Tuesday night came together before the microphone on Joe Turner's weekly broadcast. With the bulky Joe Holman between them there was no chance for a pass or two. Perhaps the wrestling atmosphere caused the scowls which the boys are reported to have exchanged.

At any rate, Van and Irving have created the most intersectional sport rivalry that has appeared here since the Mohawks, Apaches and Knickerbockers discarded their annual football battles. Southwest is 100 per cent behind Van and Northeast is equally strong in its backing of Irving. Both were born and raised in their respective sections.

Although Van and Irving will occupy the top spot on the card, Frankie Mann has worked overtime in rounding up a stellar program. Four six-rounders will back up the feature. Stumpy Jacobs, of Norfolk, meets Roy Manley, of Washington; Billy Landers, Norfolk buzz-saw, tackles Tommy Horn, of Baltimore, and recent winner over Izzy Kaplan; Barefoot Green takes on Soldier Schman, from Fort Monroe, and Bob Lowry, Northeast boy, battles Tex Mills, of Norfolk. The last named held Jimmy Reed to a draw and won from Toots Bashara.

Both Van and Irving are training at Mann's gymnasium but at different hours. Although several Portner officials would have preferred that one or the other change his headquarters, Mann insisted that the fact that both trained at the same place would have no effect on the battle. Van and Kirkwood both trained at the promoter's gym and then went out to put on one of the toughest battles of the winter, which Van won.

Bethesda High Battles In State Game Today

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School five plays its first State championship game today, meeting the Frederick High Team, winner of the Frederick County title. The game will be played at the Leland gymnasium, starting at 3 o'clock. Bethesda won the Montgomery crown, winning six straight games. During the season Bethesda won nineteen games and lost five. Two defeats were administered by Central High.

DUSTY FOOT PLACES ABROAD

Cheltenham, England, March 8 (A.P.).—J. H. (Jock) Whitney's Grand National candidate, Dusty Foot, ridden by G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, today ran second in the National Hunt Chase over 4 miles to Col. M. Lindsay's Ego.

The American - owned - and - ridden jumper finished three lengths behind the English horse after a game race. Mrs. J. Higgins' Shadylake was third.

State Title Opener To Hyattsville High

Hyattsville High School, champion of Prince Georges County, defeated Franklin High, champion of Baltimore County, yesterday in the Maryland University gym, 35 to 25. It was one of a series of games for the State title. The winners will play Annapolis High at the same place Saturday.

At half-time, Franklin High was leading, 12 to 9, and kept close to the winners in the second half until the final minutes of play. With only a few minutes to go, Cain, Calhoun and Meade cut loose with some fine passing and accurate basket shooting that gave the Prince Georges tossers the game.

AT THE POST

with Bill Benninger

DEAR AL: MIAMI, MARCH 8.

Well, friend, I slid through with Interruption, my only winner today, but I'm not giving up hope. Mike spent the afternoon trying to find me a few four-leaf clovers in the infield but he's in such a slump that he couldn't even find a three-leaf clover. In fact, I don't believe there's a clover within three miles of this track, except White Clover II. My only alibi for today is that the sun sneaked out this morning and dried the track to a frazzle after I'd burned the midnight oil in an effort to dig up mudders. For tomorrow, I've a few which will warrant your attention. BILL.

FIRST RACE—ARAB finds a sprint that should be to his liking and may stage that long-awaited killing. Has shown much early speed and, providing he draws a capable rider, will have to be beaten before another takes this purse. MORGIL and NOAH'S PRIDE appear the best of the others.

SECOND RACE—MISS MOUSE has run well for the Bennings interests and should hoof it home ahead of this field. The price can't be much, but it will be cash, I can assure you. BEOFF and LITTLE JOYCE to fight it out for the place award.

THIRD RACE—DARK MIST has been doing a lot of fast traveling of late and seems the best bet in this mile. BOSCOBEL comes over from Havana and carries enough punch to be second among this kind. The lightly weighted MUDRAKER for the show.

FOURTH RACE—This gang beats each other. At the weights I prefer GENERAL A., although I believe INDIAN RUNNER will draw the chief play. MY DANDY, LEROS and MY PURCHASE are just a shade behind the top pair.

FIFTH RACE—I'm going to let PERIODICAL run for me tomorrow. This one is no champion, but has performed for me before and has worked well since. TERRIER and CRAPSHOOTER will be right there if the chief selection makes any mistakes.

SIXTH RACE—GARLIC is in winning form and probably will move up to battle it out with WISHING STAR in the stretch. TRAFFIC JUDGE is dangerous and will be out in front as far as he goes.

SEVENTH RACE—CHOKOLOSKEE to beat ROBINSON CRUSOE and bring us a good price. The latter gets in with 100 pounds, but something must be wrong. SPUD may take the show.

East Orange, N. J., March 8.—Upsala College released its 1933 football schedule today through Graduate Manager Gunnar P. Carlson. The Vikings have eight games scheduled with three new teams on the list. New York Aggies, U. of Baltimore and Gallaudet College replace Hartwick, Lowell Tech and Trenton State. October 21 is an open date for an away-game.

56 TURN OUT FOR G. W. NINE

Candidates Addressed by Al Williams in Gymnasium.

FIFTY-SIX candidates were introduced to Coach Edward K. Morris of the George Washington University Baseball Team last night at the first call for material at the Colonials' gymnasium following the institution's recent decision to reestablish the game as a varsity sport.

Capt. Al Williams, renowned aviator, who was a big league pitcher with the Giants under John McGraw in 1915-16, and a close friend of Coach Morris, addressed the squad, pointing out that the smart team makes its own breaks, a sermon that he learned from McGraw.

The Colonials will resume baseball as a night sport, playing under the arc lights at Griffith Stadium, with all proceeds to be devoted to the National Capital Civic Fund, backer of community enterprises.

Johnny Fenlon Is Infield Candidate.

Among the talent that reported to Coach Morris last night were several former stars of the football team, including Johnny Fenlon, brilliant quarter back, who startled his listeners by asserting that he would rather play any position on the baseball field than any position on the football field. Fenlon is an infield candidate.

Fred Mulvey, end of the football team, is a candidate for the outfield, while Frank Blackiston, football center, will seek a catching berth. Bill Noonan, former Eastern High School pitcher, is also among the candidates. Eduardo Alfaro, of Panama, is a leading candidate for the first-base job.

Eleven pitchers and four catchers were among the squad to report last night. Due to the varied school hours, Coach Morris today will meet with the candidates in the gymnasium at 3 p. m., 4 p. m. and 8 p. m.

Hitting the Headpin

STAR doubles teams of Washington and Baltimore will clash tonight at the Lucky Strike alleys. Howard Campbell and George Iseman will resume their home-and-home match with Len Kocent and Walter Miller representing the Patterson alleys of Baltimore. In the first block rolled in the Monumental City, Campbell and Iseman gained a 58-pin lead. The scores were 1,182 and 1,124. The match starts at 9 o'clock.

Bill Ames, of Collective Service, and the Procurement team did all of the fancy shooting last night in the A. G. O. League. Ames shot a 150 and 367, while the top team marks were 516 and 1,609.

Fruit Growers Express, Lohi Real Estate and Goode Tinning took the odd games in the Takoma Park Businessmen's League last night, their respective victims being Old Colony Laundry, Colorado Service Station and Walking Printing Co. Elmer Strange, strange as it seems, rolled a 384 set for individual honors.

Marquette and Tony Santini were the winning combinations in the K. of C. league. The team figures were 589 and 1,783, with having a 143 game and a three-game total of 369.

With Ed Hayes, of Pepco, rolling a 147 game and a 418 set, his team walked off with team set honors, 1,673. Western Electric No. 1 had the best game, 589.

High scores in the Bankers League were: Individual game, 155, by Madden, of Hibbs, and individual set by Doing, of Washington-Loan & Trust No. 1, with 391; team game, Hibbs, 620, and team set, Washington Loan & Trust No. 1, 1,713.

Chipouris, of the Dry Cleaners, turned in a 136 game, and Beyer, of the Ladkats, a 356 set, to show the way in the Dynamite League. The Hiandrys' 545 and the Ladkats' 1,568 topped the team figures.

Two matches were played last night in the District League with the Occidental five turning in an 1,801 set to take two from the Hyattsville maple-spillers. Dutch Newman was the hero of the match, having a 147 game and a 387 set. In the other match, Columbia, with a 641 high game and a 1,799 set, made a clean sweep over Beaver Dam.

Convention Hall spilled the dope in the Ladies District League by taking all three games from the leading Rendezvous team. The winners had a 1,590 set. Helena Kohler had a 119 game and a 342 set as Arcadia cleaned up for Georgetown, while Columbia, with a 849 high game and a 1,574 set took the odd game from Petworth. In other matches, Bill Woods and Lucky Strike took two of three from Recreation and Myer Davis, respectively.

Coin Box pinmen copped the lion's share of glory in the C. & P. Telephone League. They had high team game of 575, while Widmayer helped them out with a 152 game and a 354 set. The Engineers' 1,679 set was high.

George Bain Captains 1934 V. M. I. Boxers

Lexington, Va., March 8 (A.P.).—The election of George E. Bain, of Goldsboro, N. C., as captain of the 1934 Virginia Military Institute Boxing Team was announced here today.

Mrs. Lawlor Advances In Radium Spring Golf

Albany, Ga., March 8 (A.P.).—Mrs. J. J. Lawlor, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who won medal honors in the qualifying round of the Radium Springs Invitation Tournament Tuesday, today defeated Mrs. Y. G. Hilsman, of Albany, in the first round of match play, 8 and 7.

Miss Margaret Maddox, of Atlanta, the defending champion, also scored a convincing opening-round victory, winning from Miss Jean Jacques, of New York, 6 and 4.

Mrs. S. B. Lippitt, of Albany, defeated Mrs. K. B. Hodgeson, also of Albany, 10 and 8. Mrs. Charles Harbaugh, of Cleveland, defeated Mrs. Harold Kerston, of Richmond, 5 and 4.

New Orleans Meet Reopens Saturday

May Extend Races One Week Due to Banking Holiday Lapse.

New Orleans, March 8 (A.P.).—Definite decision to reopen the Fair Grounds Race Track here next Saturday was announced today by the Crescent City Jockey Club, but the 2-year-old championship stake, originally scheduled for that day, was postponed for a week.

The stake postponement was decided upon because owners said they had not been able to properly train for the event since the temporary closure of the track due to the bank holiday.

The jockey club said it was considering a petition of racing stables here to extend the winter race meeting for a week beyond March 18 to make up for days lost this week.

The petition also contains a suggestion that the track deduct 25 per cent from each purse for the remaining racing days with which to create a fund "to relieve any distress in the racing colony."

The Fair Grounds management said the ptition would probably be granted "if the situation clears sufficiently."

supposed to know how the plot comes out in a wrestling match and when you root for the wrong guy it makes me look as though I didn't know much."

The beautiful blushing bride did not believe that at all, so papa promised to prove the truth of all he said at the next week's wrestling exhibition.

So that night, before entering the arena, he told her which gladiator was going to win and told her also that the victim would be thrown out of the ring three times, the first time at 9:45, and the next time at 10:02, and the last time at 10:13, after which, he said, the victor would himself be thrown around the ring in a careless manner for several minutes but would suddenly put forth a Herculean effort, hoist up his adversary, whirl him high in the air, and send him crashing to the boards—limp, unconscious and defeated.

The wrestling match proceeded in strict accordance with this schedule and the bride was convinced and also disillusioned, but what does that prove?

Couldn't it all have been a coincidence?

Contest Fans Disregard Records in Choices for Griffith All-Star Team

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

"EVERYONE to his liking," as Steve Brodie remarked, was thought to be just so many words by The Washington Post baseball contest editor until he started glancing through the entries as they poured in. Now, he knows that the old saying really means something, basing his sudden conversion to the belief on the exceptional scope of the fans in trying to match the "All-Griffith" team of Nats from the talent which has performed in local livery since 1912.

The writer is one of those smart fellers who thought he had a pretty good line on the good and bad players who have performed here during the last two decades, and the ballots already turned in have proven to be a revelation to him. It was no particular shock that Chick Gandil was passed up as first baseman in favor of Joe Judge or that the race for the third-base berth would be strictly between Eddie Foster and Ossie Bluege, but the results of the voting for second and short are quite surprising.

Buddy Myer Among Those Overlooked.

Fans seem to have forgotten almost entirely about Buddy Myer at second, practically all of the play going to Stanley Harris and Ray Morgan, yet the records show Myer not only a better fielder than Morgan, but also a much better hitter, the latter's best stick mark here being .272, which is 2 points lower than Myer's worst as a Nat.

The surprise with respect to the shortstop berth has to do with the little credit apparently given Roger Peckinpaugh. Peck was one of the main cogs of both of the Nats' pennant-winning machines in 1924 and 1925; so brilliant was he, in fact, that he was voted "most valuable in the league" to his team in 1925. But perhaps the Rajah's sorry showing in the world's series of that fall, when he made a record for errors, has soured the fans on him.

Neglect of Gharrity Is Surprising.

Picking of the outfield talent seems to be according to accepted form, but another shock comes in connection with the naming of the batterymen. Ed (Patsy) Gharrity, for instance, seems to be completely overlooked, while Eddie Ainsmith has been made one of the favorites. Yet the records show Gharrity not only a much better fielder but also more potent at the tee. In two seasons Ainsmith hit well below .200, with .226 his top average, while Gharrity topped Ainsmith's best mark every season but one, and once went over the .300 mark.

Probably the biggest shock among the pitching selections is the frequency with which "Long Tom" Hughes is mentioned. Players named, according to contest rules, are to be rated on their work since President Clark Griffith came to Washington as manager in 1912. Hughes might have been good before this date, but he won but 13 of 23 decisions in 1912 and but 4 of 16 the following season, which was his last here.

Zachary's Record Impressive.

Another mound candidate who seems to be passed by in favor of another southpaw, George Mogridge, is "Ole Tom" Zachary. Not only was Zachary a better fielder, a better hitter and not only was his earned run allowance lower than that of Mogridge, but his percentage figures were just about the same. In the Nats, 1924 season, when they won their first pennant, however, Zachary not only had a better record but he also won two games in the set with the New York Giants which gave Washington its only world's title in history.

Then again, many votes have been cast for Bob Groom, Joe Boehling, Harry Harper, "Doc" Ayres and Carl Cashion, with such a flinger as Stanley Coveleskie, who led the American League in both percentage of victories and in effectiveness in the successful 1925 flag race, overlooked entirely on many of these lists.

But, as Steve Brodie said: "Every one to his liking." The contest is still open and you have until March 15 to get in your vote. Let's have it.

Texas Golfer Is Killed, Hit by Friend's Drive

Folliard was hit behind the right ear yesterday as he stooped to place his ball, some 60 feet in front of the tee from which D. M. Dickey, of Anson, Tex., made his drive.

Physicians said a clot on the brain was the cause of death.

Folliard was the assistant here to the general agent of the Burlington Lines, of which the Wichita Valley is an affiliate; Dickey is the Wichita Valley agent at Anson.

3 British Golfwomen In Belleair Semifinal

Belleair, Fla., March 8 (A.P.).—Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City veteran; Barbara Pyman and Kathleen Garnham, of England, and Diana Fishwick, former British women's champion, advanced into the semifinals of the annual Belleair women's golf tournament today.

With the exception of Miss Fishwick, who overwhelmed Mrs. E. B. Gibbs, England, 7 and 6, the other semifinalists were forced to play at top form to advance.

Mrs. Hill shot a beautiful round of 82 against Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., but was unable to win with the regulation distance, when Miss Wall squared the match on the eighteenth hole with a fine par four to Mrs. Hill's five. On the extra hole Mrs. Hill played perfect golf for a four, while Miss Wall went to pieces and required seven strokes.

Miss Pyman defeated Mrs. Stewart Hanley, Detroit, 2 and 1, in a nip-and-tuck battle, and Miss Garnham shot an 85 to defeat Gwendolyn Hartropp, England, on the final hole.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE opening of the extra session of Congress, called by President Roosevelt, will be broadcast by both national chains from the floor of the House of Representatives today.

Permission to install microphones on the rostrum of the House was granted by Representative Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, who is expected to be elected Speaker at the opening session. This is the third time that microphones have been permitted in the House of Representatives, the other two occasions being the inaugural of Hoover four years ago and the inaugural of President Roosevelt last Saturday.

Tomorrow's broadcast will include the election of the new Speaker and the reading of President Roosevelt's special message to Congress, if it is sent to Congress tomorrow. Announcers will describe the activities attending the convening of the House.

WRC will be on the air from the floor of the House at 11:55 o'clock. WJSV will broadcast an address by Admiral Richard E. Byrd immediately prior to the opening.

Mrs. Curtis B. Dall, daughter of President Roosevelt, will do a series of talks over Station WEAF only, beginning March 17. The series will be sponsored by Best & Co., New York department store. Mrs. Dall will be heard twice weekly.

"Parsifal," Richard Wagner's great sacred drama of the Holy Grail, will be broadcast in part from the Metropolitan Opera House over WRC, beginning at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon.

Artur Bodanzky will conduct the opera, which will be sung in German with the following cast:

Amfortas, Friedrich Schorr.
Titurel, his father, Siegfried Tappolet.
Gurnemanz, keeper of the gate, Ludwig Hofmann.
Parsifal, Lauritz Melchior.
Klingsor, Gustav Schutzendorf.
Kundry, Frida Leider.
The Voice, Doris Doe.
First Knight, Angelo Bada.
Second Knight, Louis D'Angelo.
First Esquire, Helen Gleason.
Second Esquire, Philine Falco.
Third Esquire, Marek Windheim.
Fourth Esquire, Max Altglass.

THE March meeting of the Washington section of the Institute of Radio Engineers will be held tonight at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments, 3133 Connecticut avenue.

An informal dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m. and at 8 o'clock, R. N. Stoddard, of the tube apparatus section, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., will give a paper on "Recent Industrial Use of Photo-Electric Tubes."

Helen Morgan, sitting on top of a studio piano while she chants her sad songs, and Bert Lahr, Broadway and radio comedian, will head the bill presented by Rudy Vallee (WRC, 6 p. m.).

A scene from "East Lynne," featuring Edith Barrett and A. E. Matthews, of the New York stage, and Reginald Carrington, veteran actor, also will be offered.

Eddie Cantor will return to a Washington vaudeville stage for the first time since he kidded his way to air fame, at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning Friday. Old Maestro Bernie, with all the lads, comes to the Earle Theater the same day. If Washington radio fans run true to form, the theaters needn't do too much worrying about next week's business.

It is not likely that anyone will be allowed to witness their broadcasts to the national network from the studios of Station WRC on Sunday and Tuesday nights, respectively. The studios are small and the demand for seats so great that it is probably the station management will be obliged to put out the "No admittance" sign.

YOU'VE got to be temperamental to write songs, declares Don Bestor, band leader, whose hits have been heard over the Nation's loud speakers for the past ten years.

"Songs aren't written like letters," said Bestor. "The inspiration of the moment is important and unless the writer can put himself in the proper mood or in a situation where the inspiration is spontaneous, nothing inspiring will come forth."

Nearly every one of Bestor's hits was written under stress or in unusual circumstances. "Contented," one of his best known tunes, was written while he was having a violent headache. Bestor composes without a piano or any other musical instrument and he will not see even his best friends when he is writing.

New York's reception to the "Forty-second Street Special" G. E. train, which visited Washington for the inaugural, will be broadcast over WMAL at 11:45 a. m.

Lanny Ross' second movie short, "How I Became a Radio Star," is about to be released by Paramount. Ross is heard weekly on Capt. Henry's Show Boat program.

IN an indigo mood Andrea Marsh, contralto, will offer, "I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues," during her quarter-hour broadcast (WRC, 6:45 p. m.) "The Man I Love" and "Till Tomorrow" complete the program.

"If I had a million dollars tomorrow I wouldn't quit radio,' said Victor Hall, second tenor of the Rollickers Quartet, heard regularly over national networks.

"If you had a million you'd probably drop dead," Clark Bremer, top tenor of the same quartet, retorted.

That's confidence.

Mrs. Gertrude Berg, writer and actor in that radio sketch of East Side New York life, "The Rise of the Goldbergs," is the mother of two children . . . a boy and a girl. She plays the part of a mother of a boy and a girl in the radio skit.

LEW WHITE, organist, has brought a new instrument . . . the vibraharp . . . to the microphone. What's a vibraharp? Well, not to be technical, it's a cross between a vibraphone and a harp with a keyboard like a piano and is played like an organ. The new musicmaker is the invention of a Philadelphian. Lew claims that the vibraharp creates more pleasing tonal effects than either the vibraphone or the harp when those instruments are played individually. He is the first to experiment with the vibraharp on the air. If the experiments are successful, Lew expects to use the instrument regularly during his broadcasts.

Rotary Club Plays Host To International Official

Washington Rotarians acted as host at their Willard luncheon meeting yesterday to Allen Bagg, third vice president of Rotary International, and to Edward Johnson, governor of the fifty-sixth Rotary district, including the State of Virginia.

The speaker of the day was Marcy L. Sperry, president of the Washington Gas Light Co. Mr. Sperry gave an interesting talk on economic conditions in New England, showing how for the most part that section of the country, although it did not boom with the rest of the county prior to 1929, nevertheless, has been less seriously affected economically since that year.

A New Yorker at Large

By MARK BARRON.

New York, March 8.—In the silk stocking district of Park and Madison avenues there is a blind musician. He has one of those small pianos about the size of a wardrobe trunk, which he pushes around on wheels.

Parked on a corner, he plays hot blues and jazz songs, leaning slightly over, as he has no piano stool and must play standing up. He says he takes in a fairly good sum every day.

He lives in the upper reaches of Harlem, about 4 miles away from the swanky neighborhood in which he plays. I wondered how he carted that piano back and forth, as it would be impossible to carry it on the subway.

It seems he has a brother who drives a truck down on the water front. On his way home at night he stops to pick up the musician and his piano, and off they amble for home.

BEST PERFORMANCES.

Having listed, some weeks ago, what the critics generally regarded as the 12 best performances given by actresses in the last two decades, I have a letter from a woman in Rochester, N. Y., inquiring why actors were neglected.

So a consensus of critics seems to rate these 12 performances by actors as best:

John Barrymore in "Hamlet," Frank Craven in "Bought and Paid For," Alfred Lunt in "Outward Bound," Lionel Barrymore in "The Copperhead," Nat Goodwin in "Oliver Twist," Richard B. Harrison in "The Green Pastures," Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'," Walter Huston in "Desire Under the Elms," George M. Cohan in "The Song and Dance Man," Charles Gilpin in "The Emperor Jones," Louis Wolheim in "What Price Glory?" and Frank McGlynn in "Abraham Lincoln."

And where are those actors today? John Barrymore, Frank Craven, Lionel Barrymore and Walter Huston are in Hollywood. Nat Goodwin, Frank Bacon, Charles Gilpin and Louis Wolheim are dead.

Alfred Lunt is playing on Broadway in "Design for Living," and George M. Cohan is in "Pigeons and People." Richard B. Harrison is just beginning his fourth year in "The Green Pastures."

The Meanderer

Gathers List of Many Things Suitable for Visitors to Take to Those Back Home After the Inaugural Visit.

Telephone questions on The Meanderer's column to The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 19; or address The Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

"What shall we take home from Washington?" visitors who have lingered through the week after the inauguration are asking themselves. The Meanderer herewith offers her humble suggestions:

Candies. One kind of candy with a patriotic name is selling in especially prepared packages, tied with patriotic ribbons. In an outside corner of these candy boxes is a special place for inserting appropriate cards to express the giver's greetings. Pound boxes cost 90 cents and other have prices up to $3.50, which buys five pounds.

Compacts. Coty's triple compacts in the new platinum tone finish, less than two inches square, cost just $1.49, and Houbigant's new triple compacts in brilliantly topped boxes are $1.50. A department store has these special prices for a limited time only.

Cigarette cases. Long flat cigarette cases in green, red or white, about the size of an envelope, holding 20 cigarettes, may be initialed while you wait, cost $1, in an F street department store.

Klipsies. In cases you don't know what they are ask for them by name near the main elevators in a big department store on F street. Klipsies are used to fasten to glasses for cocktail serving, so that each guest may have his glass labeled for the entire evening. Klipsies are in the form of tiny animals, six for $1.

Perfumes. The famous little—or big—crown shaped containers of perfumes of faultless choice, sold exclusively by a Fourteenth street department store—have odors named for colorful, queenlike persons in history or fiction.

Soaps. Ten large cakes of soap and eight guest size cakes are in attractive packages for $1.25. They have the store's crest stamped upon them. In the assortment are green soaps with bouquet odor; yellow soap, jasmine odor; rose, with rose odor; lavender, with violet scent, and a white cold cream soap.

Cosmetics. Three articles from a famous house for skin refreshment are wrapped in special packages costing just $1.25. Four white containers with deep red tops packed by Alexandra de Markoff, sell in a department store for $3, in a convenient box for packing.

Oil Company Asks Writ Against Murray's Orders

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

HUMIDIFY THE AIR.

A CUBIC foot of air at a temperature of zero will absorb only little more than a half grain of water. The same air when at a temperature of 85 degrees, can carry thirteen grains of water and what is more, it will rob anything living or dead in order to get the water it needs. The thirst for a drink of whisky experienced by a man suffering from the dark brown taste of the morning after is mild in comparison with that of hot, dry air. When cold air is brought into a house and heated it must also be watered, else the inhabitants and the furniture will suffer.

Dr. E. C. Rosenow worked out a method of humidification for his own home, and, being a man of laboratory training, he has made it the subject of some investigation. He contends that the air should be watered at the time when and the place where it is heated. In a house heated by radiators the humidifying apparatus is attached to each set of coils. Another opinion of his is that it is not necessary to spray water into the air or even to heat it materially.

He uses pans set on the top of the radiators. On these pans there are evaporating fins, as he calls them, composed of paper supported by a wire frame work. The fins touch the water in the pans and take it up by capillary attraction. Air heated by the radiator coils flows through the space between the fins absorbing air from them. When the paper becomes clogged with salts from the water and dirt from the air it is discarded and new fins are inserted in the frame.

The amount of fin required is one square foot for each 100 cubic feet of space in a room. Such an installation will evaporate as much as two gallons of water daily in a regular room on an ordinary day with the outside temperature and humidity about as it usually is in winter. The amount of evaporation will keep the humidity at 40 to 50 if the windows are double glassed, and at 12 to 22 if they are but single glassed.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

LILYAN TASHMAN is reputed to be the "best dressed lady on the screen." So harken to her observation.

Her theory is similar to that of leading beauty authorities everywhere. Know your good points and emphasize them. That is one sure way of minimizing minor flaws.

By calling attention to those of your features, for instance, that are well-formed and please you, the others fade into the background and often go unnoticed.

Take the case of a face with lovely lips but a long nose. The lips should be cleverly accented with the right shade of rouge and shaped to bring out all their beauty. A touch of rouge directly under the nose may make it appear shorter. When you glance at such a face the first feature to speak its beauty should be the mouth.

Or, if the eyes are very lovely, but the mouth a little too generous, it is well to rouge the lips the least bit or not at all, but to accent the eyes with shadow and mascara, and of course, keep the eyes healthy and sparkling.

Miss Tashman is one of those delightfully rare individuals who practices what she preaches. Her hair is her strong point, therefore, he always keeps it beautifully groomed. One coiffure which she chooses and which many of the leading beauty salons throughout the country are featuring shows her hair off to perfection. One deep swirl in the back, with a part running lengthwise down the back of the head, hair swirling from left to right, then to the right side, it breaks into a high ripple of curls. It's a really charming coiffure for sweet young things.

Women are becoming more and more hair-minded and more and more heads are being glorified. If your hair is your strong point, follow Miss Tashman's advice. There's wisdom in her words.

Culbertson on Bridge

By ELY CULBERTSON

PASSING A FORCING BID.

UNQUESTIONABLY the use of psychic bids has added a tremendous thrill to contract for many players. To outguess an opponent at the bridge table is an accomplishment, particularly when the opponent happens to be one of the world's outstanding players. To leave one of the world's ranking players short of game after a forcing bid has been made is one of the major crimes in the decalogue of almost all players of the game.

Mr. Raymond Balfe, who plays bridge at Cronkford's Club, New York, is, no doubt, one of the most brilliant contract players in the world. His use of deceptive tactics has gained him the reputation as one of the most difficult of all opponents. He is not, however, much of a user of complicated psychic bids, but occasionally, with a fine partner, he likes to open the bidding first hand with a semi-psychic lead-directing bid. This type of psychic bid is considered one of the most dangerous, inasmuch as with little honor strength it is entirely possible to find a partner with a very fine hand.

Spades	3 2
Hearts	6 5 4
Diamonds	7 3
Clubs	K Q 8 7 6 4

Both sides were vulnerable, but despite this Mr. Balfe boldly bid one club. The next hand passed and Mr. Jacoby bid two spades, holding:

Spades	A Q J 10 4
Hearts	A K J 10
Diamonds	A 6
Clubs	3 2

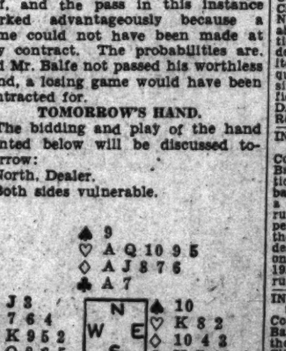
Obviously Mr. Balfe was "on the spot." He knew that after Mr. Jacoby's forcing bid a game might be lost if he passed, but if he bid again, a losing slam might be contracted for. Accordingly, weighing the question from both sides, he decided that the risk of loss, through a further bid, was greater than the chance of game, and he passed and Mr. Jacoby made three spades.

The bidding of this hand has in it a very fine lesson to those who make psychic and semipsychic opening bids. With almost all players it is part of their gospel never to pass a forcing bid, and this is unquestionably the safest rule in the long run, as to pass such a bid has a tendency to break down partnership morale. However, a very fine player is a law unto himself, and the pass in this instance worked advantageously because a game could not have been made at any contract. The probabilities are, had Mr. Balfe not passed his worthless hand, a losing game would have been contracted for.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

THE younger men continue to break old records in every type of sport, but one old record that remains untouched is that of the famous old-time player, Wee Willie Keeler. Keeler, in 700 consecutive trips to the plate, was not fanned once. He started his record late in the 1895 season, continuing throughout the 1896 season and several games into 1897 without striking out. Keeler played during his career with Baltimore, Brooklyn and the New York Americans.

The storage of light is accomplished in a glass sphere invented by Ethan I. Dobbs, American scientist who has patented more devices than any other living American. Into the globe one need only flash the light of a flashlight for a moment to furnish enough light to keep the globe giving out a soft glow for two hours.

Smead Jolley, when he was a Chicago White Sox outfielder, let the ball get away from him twice and overthrew for the third error—all in one play. It happened on a grounder. The ball rolled between his legs for error No. 1; he turned to catch it as it rebounded from the fence, but missed, for error No. 2; and then pounced on it and threw wide of the plate for error No. 3.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

CODE FOR THE CRISES.

(With apologies to Mr. Jesse Isidor Straus.)

I TRUST my Government, now that the clutch appears to have stopped slipping.

I trust our banks, open or shut, and I feel better about them when closed by wise Government action than operating in a fog of whispers.

I do not expect the impossible, and I think the long delay in recovery is due to the fact that we were encouraged to expect it.

I believe the attitude toward a bad financial situation should be the same as the attitude toward a crippled automobile: It should be fixed before we go any farther and it is always a mistake merely to jiggle the carburetor and hope everything will come out all right ultimately.

* * * *

I believe nothing helps change crowd psychology more than a change of pitchers after eleven runs have been scored in one inning.

I think Franklin D. Roosevelt has already acted on the public backbone like ethyl gas on a skipping motor.

I think the spectacle of a President lashing out straight from the shoulder and acting at once has sent a wave of courage and optimism up the spine of a people who had become convinced that the best they could hope for were some resolutions and a ringside report of a filibuster.

I shall proceed on the assumption that the new administration realizes a locomotive can not proceed after a wreck until it is fixed and put back on the track, and that in the history of the world no dead horse ever got up and won a race.

I am immeasurably encouraged by the signs that the Government of the United States knows it is folly to try to help a sick cow by giving it free access to a medicine cabinet; and that the first thing to do is to recognize what is the matter with the cow and not give it pills if a leg is broken.

* * * *

I am not afraid of anything that I can see and understand, and I believe the dark forms, creeping shadows and hoarse whisperers which, quite frankly, made me pretty jittery, are a thing of the past.

I know there is plenty to criticize in the conduct of our financial leaders in the boom times, but I admit that there wasn't much to choose between the ideals and ethics of the leaders, and the ideals and ethics of so many of us who were running behind them in the hysterical pursuit of personal profit. (Vas you dere, Sharlie?)

I realize that the big bust was due, in part, to a collapse of high ideals and lofty standards of personal conduct in the high places, but I'm frank enough to admit that there was a pretty general collapse in the low places.

I think President Roosevelt's inaugural speech was like a bucket of ice water in the face of a groggy boxer and that it had in it a quality of deep sincerity and spiritual leadership, which promises a realization of our best hopes.

I feel better facing the facts and seeing something done about them.

It may be funny, but I feel more optimistic at the moment with one hand full of scrip than I felt last week with a gold bar in each hand.

POKER NOTE.

It is to be hoped that in that new deal the President will give the banks jacks or better so they can open.

"Well," said Improvident Ignatz, who had never saved a nickel in his life, as he sat on a park bench and read about the banks, "That's what I always feared."

And then there is the man who had so far lost confidence in everything that he wanted to know if we would give him two five-dollar I. O. U.s for a ten-dollar promise.

THE PRESIDENCY.

A little minding of your muttons—
A little term, a little vote—
And no more pressing silly buttons!

A little joy, a little gloom,
A little ride, a little fall—
And no more corner stones and mortar!

A little reign (a little snow)
A little while with joy-ride hitchers;
A little run, a big defeat—
And no more throwing balls to pitchers!

A little rise, a little fall,
A little stay among the mighty;
A little while upon the throne—

A little praise, some rousing toasts,
Some years with little time for dozing;
A fickle public at the polls—
And no more newsreel picture posing!

RATE SHIFTS TRACED OVER 8-YEAR PERIOD FOR UTILITIES BOARD

Martin's Figures Show How Schedules Have Changed for City Sinoe 1925.

Consistent reductions in rates have been brought about for two local utilities by the Public Utilities Commission since its organization in 1925, a slight cut has been effected for a third, but higher rates have been obtained for the fourth, viz, the street railways, over the commission's protests.

Figures showing these changes in rates by years, prepared by James L. Martin, executive secretary of the commission, were submitted yesterday to William A. Roberts, special assistant counsel of the utilities body.

One Telephone Reduction.

The most pronounced cuts have been made in electric rates, largely during the operation of the consent decree, recently abrogated, but replaced by a less restrictive consent agreement. Since 1925 the domestic electric rate has fallen 3.6 cents per kilowatt hour, or from 7.5 cents to 3.9 cents.

Gas rates remained unchanged until October 1, 1930, staying at $1 a 1,000 cubic feet for the first 50,000. At that time the rate was lowered to $1 for the first 1,500 cubic feet and 90 cents for the excess. The next change came on March 1, 1932, when the rate was cut to $1 for the first 1,000 cubic feet, 90 cents for the next 2,000, and 85 cents for the excess.

Electric Rates Cut Most.

Telephone rates have been reduced only once. On May 13, 1925, the flat rate was cut from $5 to $4.75, with the messages allowed on the two-party $2.50 charge increased from 35 to 40. Since then there has been no change, though the commission last year ordered a 10 per cent reduction, only to be balked by court injunction.

Street car fares were 8 cents cash and six token for 40 cents until July 10, 1930, when the courts allowed an increase to 10 cents cash and four tokens for 30 cents.

Valuations are nearing completion for the Washington Gas Light Co. and the street railways, and a valuation of the property of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. is planned, though no time of beginning it has been set.

Georgetown Plots Asked for Gardens

Meeting Launches Drive to Provide Ground Jobless Families May Till.

Efforts to obtain at least 200 garden plots for the use of unemployed families in the Georgetown section will be launched at once as the result of a meeting held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry H. Flather, 3306 O street northwest.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, chairman of the garden committee of the Council of Social Agehcies, presided and outlined the progress of the work in other sections of the city. Mrs. Brooke went into the history of the movement, started in war times when food was scarce, and told of the revival of the plan to aid unemployed families.

Miss Louise Harlow, of the Associated Charities, said that her organization had on its Georgetown list about 50 families who would want gardens. Miss Elizabeth Mulholland, of the Catholic Charities, said her organization would supply about 10 to 15 families, and Miss Pearl Paulson, of the emergency relief division of the Board of Public Welfare, said that there are potential thousands under the care of her organization who will want gardens, with probably 75 to 100 in Georgetown.

Mrs. Flather was authorized to ask certain people to serve as committee heads, and these will have the power to act.

Dental Supply House Reports Ample Gold

Reports that local dentists were experiencing difficulty in obtaining dental gold under present restrictions were proven unfounded last night when a poll of dentists and dental supply concerns revealed an ample amount on hand.

Frank H. Grimes, manager of the W. A. Lockwood Dental Supply Co., 1218 H street northwest, said his concern was ready to meet all demands of local dentists.

"We have been placed under no restrictions as yet," Mr. Grimes declared, "and I am certain we shall not be. Our gold supply is sufficient to handle all needs."

SENATOR KING, CHIEF OF D.C. COMMITTEE, TO FOSTER ECONOMY

Utahan Plans to Work With Mrs. Norton's Group on Capital Measures.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, yesterday formally accepted the reins of the Senate District Committee, and announced he will call a meeting of the body immediately following the Senate's confirmation of his appointment.

The Utah senator, whose selection by the Democratic steering committee was exclusively forecast in The Post February 16, said he wants to talk over questions of policy with his committee at the earliest possible moment.

Against Gasoline Tax Rise.

Additional Democratic members will be announced today. It is expected they will include Senator Fred H. Brown (Democrat), New Hampshire, who has asked for a place on the committee.

Interviewed yesterday, Senator King said he favors greater retrenchment in the District government, the House $6,500,000 lump sum proposal as against the $9,500,000 recommended by the Senate, and local income and inheritance taxes. He is opposed to an increase in the gasoline tax and favors abolition of the tax on intangibles.

Will Seek Out Mrs. Norton.

He plans to approach Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, on joint session with that body in the interest of dispatching all major local legislation, he said.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Efficiency's study of Federal-District fiscal relations, made at the request of Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, appeared likely to die when the bureau expires June 1. Senator King said he will not ask the bureau to complete the report, unless directed to do so by his committee.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, new honorary president of the Girl Scouts of America, will make her first appearance in this capacity at the coming-of-age "birthday" party of the Scouts Saturday at 2:30 p. m. at Memorial Continental Hall. Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Cheatham, District of Columbia Girl Scout commissioner, extended the invitation to Mrs. Roosevelt, who promptly accepted. The new First Lady also agreed to say a few words to the Girl Scouts.

Under the direction of a committee, headed by Mrs. Cheatham, elaborate plans are being made. Miss Francois May, daughter of the Belgian Ambassador, with her group, will have charge of ushering. There will be talks by Horace Albright, Director of the National Parks, and Dr. Harold C. Bryant, Assistant Director of National Parks. Mrs. Herbert Hoover, retiring honorary president, whose interest in scouting led her to accept as well the honorary commissionership of the District of Columbia, was honored yesterday by being appointed honorary commissioner emeritus of the District of Columbia. A letter notifying her of her new office was sent to Mrs. Hoover in California.

PROHIBITION CHIEFS YIELD LEAD IN DRIVE TO KEEP NATION DRY

By EDMUND G. MONK.

Drydom's most famous czars in the perennial prohibition strife yesterday peacefully yielded their flaming swords to new leaders in stately Calvary Baptist Church, where antirepeal forces finished welding their battle plans for the ponderous task of keeping the United States dry.

The nearly 1,000 representatives of dry groups the land over edicted that a committee of nine, augmented by a committee of one hundred, shall constitute the guiding hands in again carrying to the States the turbulent question of prohibition.

The names of Bishop James J. Cannon, of Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Deets Pickett, of Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of F. Scott McBride, all those familiar cognomens who formed a constellation that once revolved around that of Wayne B. Wheeler, are gone from prohibition's board of strategy.

Personnel Undecided.

Late last night the ways and means committee of the dry conference worked in an effort to select the final nine to compose the new executive group of the national prohibition movement. Adjournment was finally taken with announcement that in 24 hours the personnel of the new strategy board would be named.

By unanimous vote of the assembled foes of alcoholic beverage, the resolution containing the plan of action stipulated that none of the committee of nine should be drawn from present officers of temperance organizations.

All of the long-time banner bearers against booze will be on the committee of 100 and will actively participate in the struggle to keep 36 State constitutional conventions from ratifying the proposal to repeal the eighteenth amendment; but they will be subordinate to a new group of leaders and probably a new line of attack.

The committee of 100, with the reigning hand of the committee of nine, will immediately set to work in the respective States with a storm of meetings and literature against the approval of the repeal proposal.

Drive for Funds Begun.

A drive for funds was begun yesterday among the delegates, practically all of whom subscribed $25 and many more. The campaign for financial sinews will begin in village and city immediately.

In some States, debate and conference side talk indicated effort will be put forth to prevent the calling of constitutional conventions while in others attack will be centered on electing delegates against the repeal proposal.

The rise of the new leadership and the fall of the old was noticeable throughout the two-day conference. Sour grape reaction, however, was missing and Bishop Cannon himself was the one who moved final adoption of the resolution which deprived him of high leadership in the coming campaign.

Among leaders in the conference were Bishop C. Lester Smith, of Cincinnati, who was part-time chairman of the ways and means committee; Bishop Hughes, of Washington, who presided, and former Representatives Ketcham and Hudson, of Michigan.

Woman, 36, Recovering From Swallowing Poison

Mrs. Gertrude Prichard, 36, last night swallowed a quantity of poison in the bathroom of her apartment at 3525 Davenport street northwest.

She was found by her husband, James H. Prichard, who summoned the Emergency Hospital ambulance. Physicians said that her condition was not serious.

Boy Bicyclist Injured When Struck by Auto

Joseph Cohen, 13, of 800 Tennessee avenue northeast, suffered a fractured skull and possible internal injuries yesterday afternoon when knocked from his bicycle by an automobile at Neal street and Trinidad avenue northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Police said the car was driven by Kenneth VanCamp, 21, of 1210 Owen place northeast.

He became a thirty-second degree Mason in November, 1907, and received the distinction of Knight Commander of the Court of Honor in October, 1911. His career in the Imperial Council began with his election as outer guard in San Francisco in 1922, and he was accorded the highest honor in the gift of the Imperial Council in being elected imperial potentate in the same city in 1932.

EARL C. MILLS.

WEBER MUSIC PLEA MADE TO SWANSON

New Naval Secretary Asked to Limit Service Bands' Radio Activities.

Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, yesterday asked Secretary of the Navy Swanson to continue the order promulgated by his predecessor limiting broadcasts of the Navy and Marine bands to special occasions.

In his letter, Mr. Weber pointed out that his organization has "consistently protested against the use which the Navy Department has for many years permitted the broadcasting industry, other commercial enterprises and individuals of wealth and position to make of these Government instrumentalities."

"We are confident," he continued, "that to put these bands into the service of commercial corporations operating for profit or of private individuals is in direct violation of Federal statutes, designed to protect the rights of private citizens to earn their livelihood free from competition with those on the government pay roll whose livelihood is guaranteed by the public treasury."

He also charged that the Navy Department had pursued a ruthless course and heartlessly ignored the privations of thousands of unemployed musicians. He further pointed out the question is broader than that which affect the use of the Navy and Marine Bands, adding that they were only 2 of 56 bands under the Navy Department, while the War Department controls 89.

6-Foot-4 Man Jailed In Attacking Policeman

Police Court Judge Isaac R. Hitt yesterday fined Fred Murphy, colored, $15 for being intoxicated and disorderly and then sent him to jail for 30 days for assaulting Policeman C. H. Gould.

Murphy, who is 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 240 pounds, attacked the policeman when the latter attempted to stop a fight at Seventh and N streets northwest. Police reserves were called before the trouble was ended. George Murphy, also colored, with whom Fred was fighting, was fined $5 for disorderly conduct.

Labor and Builders Get Bid to Five-Day Parley

Representatives of local union labor and the Master Builders Association have been invited to confer with Maj. John C. Gotwals, engineer commissioner, regarding his proposal to put all municipal construction projects on a 5-day week basis.

The plan has been approved by Corporation Counsel William W. Bride and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, but Maj. Gotwals wants to obtain the reaction of labor organizations and builders before making it effective.

Roosevelt Will Join National Press Club

Farley Follows Example in Filing Application in Organization.

Postmaster General James A. Farley last night followed the example of President Roosevelt in making application for membership in the National Press Club. Announcement of the President's application was made yesterday at the White House press conference.

The President's application was indorsed by Bascom N. Timmons, former president of the press club and Kirk Simpson, White House correspondent. The Postmaster General's application carried the indorsement of Mr. Timmons and Eugene S. Leggett, also a past president of the club.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley will be associate members. Since its beginning, every President of the United States has been a member of the Press Club. Taft and Wilson were nonactive members by reason of the fact that they had, at one time in their careers, engaged in newspaper work. Harding was an active member, elected as a newspaper editor before he became President. Coolidge and Hoover were both associate members.

Freshmen to Hear About Dancing.

Freshmen at Roosevelt High School will be addressed by Miss Evelyn Davis on the "Modern Concert Dance," this morning. Miss Davis is the daughter of Allan Davis, principal of Roosevelt.

PAGE VOICES FAITH IN NEW GENERATION

Father-Mother-Son Banquet of Woodward Boys School Hears Speaker.

William Tyler Page, former clerk of the House, voiced faith in the rising generation of young citizens in an address last night at the father-mother-son banquet of the Woodward School for Boys in the Central Y. M. C. A. assembly hall.

Closer comradeship between boys and their parents was the theme of the banquet, and Mr. Page and other speakers stressed the influence of the home on good citizenship. As a tribute to the guest of honor, the students recited in unison the patriotic creed he composed.

Parents and sons exchanged formal compliments at the banquet. A toast "Our Dads" was given by Thomas Todd and one to "Our Mothers" was voiced by Dick Kohler. Mrs. J. H. Stansfield responded with a toast to "Our Sons." A dramatic sketch depicting the understanding that should exist between boys and parents was presented by James Marsh, William Powell, Connor Huff and Norman Botsford, students.

The "Four Horsemen," school quartet, and the Woodward School Orchestra took part in the entertainment program. School songs were led by Joe Brookhart, Bob Roberts, Jack Call and George Weickhardt.

Dr. H. B. Humphrey, Department of Agriculture scientist, was toastmaster and James J. King, headmaster of the school, was in charge. Mothers attended the banquet for the first time, the celebration in the past having been a father-and-son affair.

Prof. Kilpatrick Talks At Roosevelt Tonight

A philosophy of education to fit the present situation will be discussed by Prof. William H. Kilpatrick, of Columbia University, at Roosevelt High School at 8 p. m. today.

Dr. Kilpatrick will speak under the auspices of the National Education Association of the District, of which Harold E. Warner, principal of the Hine Junior High School, is president. The speaker is considered an outstanding authority on education and its present problems.

35 IN UNEMPLOYED PARADE CONVICTED, BUT ARE SET FREE

Personal Bonds Are Granted; Four Acquitted Outright and All Warned.

Thirty-five members of the Unemployed Council of Washington were convicted yesterday of parading without a permit. Four others were acquitted when policemen failed to identify them as paraders who were attempting to march on the District Building from Twelfth and P streets northwest Monday.

Upon recommendation of Assistant Corporation Counsel Ted Welliver, Judge Gus A. Schuldt, before whom the 39 were tried in a group, permitted them to go without either a fine or imprisonment. He released all on their personal bonds on their promise not to parade, in the future, without first obtaining a license.

Violence Tales Discarded.

Stories of alleged attacks by police upon marchers were discarded by Judge Schuldt, who held that there were only two issues before him. The first was "Was There a Parade?" and the second was "Were You a Member of That Parade?"

As each defendant was called to the stand he was asked if he was one of the paraders, and when admission was made that he was, he was asked if he had a permit.

Police Obtained Evidence.

Traffic Director Van Duzer had refused a permit for the parade because of the throngs of persons still in the city after the inauguration.

Judge Schuldt, in ruling on the suggestion that the police allowed the marchers to walk on after they had been accosted, thus leading the paraders to believe they could continue their demonstration, declared the police first had to make certain there was a parade by permitting the group to continue a reasonable distance.

New Child Adoption Law Is to Be Urged

Juvenile Protective Group Is Preparing Drive for Measure.

Declaring the life and well-being of every child born in the District is endangered by the inadequacy of the law governing the adoption of children, Miss Mildred Terrett, director of the Juvenile Protective Association, yesterday announced that the committee on community resources of her organization is completing plans for an aggressive campaign for the enactment of a new adoption law.

Miss Terrett stated that Dr. H. G. Spaulding, of the George Washington University law school, is now engaged in drafting the new law, which, it is hoped, will replace the 38-year-old statute.

The adopted child, she added, is made an heir under the law for any property possessed by the adoptive parents, the same as if he were a blood descendant.
